THE MARROW BED.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Gardening Correspondent says:—

Vegetable Marrow plants are now obtainable, and, failing home raising, should now be promptly planted, and where delayed until now they have the advantage of a sun-warmed rooting medium—that is, on the previously prepared heap. Once well on the run main stems should be stopped at three feet to encourage lateral growth for bearing. With ample room on the bed, one may introduce a few plants of Long Ridge Cucumber, which, as well as providing fruits for the pickle jar, not seldom yield them of quite serviceable size for salad purposes—if it is the true Long Ridge variety. Then, too, we like the plan of breaking up a brick or two of Mushroom spawn and prodding lumps the size of a hen's egg along the sides of the bed. Again we venture to repeat our recommendation of the delicious little Custard Marrow. Bush Marrows are profitable for planting on the flat, given a spadeful of manure to give them a start and a short stake to the stem to avoid wind breakage.

Unsatisfactory dealing by any advertiser in this column should be immediately reported to the Manager of the "Irish Times." 14/10/'28.

AILMENTS OF DUCKS.

Writing on this subject in the Weekly Irish Times, the Poultry Correspondent says:—

A very common trouble with ducks during the hot summer months is a sort of apoplexy, which people in the country call "staggers," which is generally produced by exposure to the sun. No birds of the poultry yard suffer so much from too much heat as goslings and ducklings. If ducklings are reared in brooders great care should be exercised so that they are not overheated, and they only require lamp heat for a few days. If they are allowed to go about under the direct rays of the sun, they are often stricken down and fall helpless on their backs. When this happens they should have a douche of cold water. Wherever ducks are kept there should be always plenty of shade, bushes and shrubs, if possible.

ORGAN RECITAL.

ST. SAVIOUR'S, DOMINICK STREET.

In the Church of St. Saviour's, Dominick street, Dublin, last night, an organ recital was given by Mr. J. Turner Huggard. The organ, which was built in 1852, has been reconstructed and brought up to date recently. The latest system of electric action has been installed, with new soundboards of the modern sliderless type, giving perfect response and repetition to the key touch. The compass of the manuals has been extended, pipes have been repaired and revoiced, and several new stops have been added.

The public had an opportunity at last night's recital to judge of the improvements that have been effected. Mr. Turner Huggard presented a programme which was an exacting and searching test not alone of the instrument, but of the player himself. The opening fanfare of the Bach Toccata and Fugue in D Minor was given with a brilliant tone and a clarity that was delightful. The power and musical qualities of the instrument were revealed in the Toccata and later in the mazes of the Fugue. Beautifully appealing under the treatment of the recitalist was the lovely Andante Cantabile of Tschaikowsky, which brought out the exquisite tones of the hautbois and other reed stops. A striking contrast was the Mendelssohn piece (Variations on a Chorale), which helped to demonstrate the pedal stops. A couple of compositions by Wolstenholme and An Arcadian Idyll by Lemare gave further opportunity for demonstration of the softer shades, while music of Wagner, Hollins and Widor further served to display the capabilities of the instrument.

"The Irish Builder and Engineer" this year completes its seventieth year of publication, having been founded in 1859, and in celebration of the event a special issue of the paper is published this week. The issue is a very interesting one, and will be preserved as a record of the period covered by the publication of the paper.

LAW REPORTS.

CO. KERRY ESTATE.

COMMITTAL ORDER REVERSED.

The hearing concluded of the appeal by the defendant in the case of Bridget Hickey, wife of Florence Hickey, of Gortnaboul, Kilgarvan, Co. Kerry, against Daniel F. Kelly, farmer, of the same place, from a decision of Mr. Justice Sullivan and Mr. Justice Hanna in the High Court, affirming, on appeal, a decision of Circuit Judge McElligott, committing the defendant to prison for contempt of court in disobeying an order of the Circuit Judge directing him to pay £146 11s. and £25 into Court to the credit of the estate of the late Stephen Kelly, farmer, of the locality mentioned, which was being administered by the plaintiff, the deceased man having died intestate.

The judges in the High Court had differed in opinion with respect to the case, and dismissed the appeal with costs. The Circuit Court order, which was dated 3rd October, 1928, had also directed the defendant to hand over, on or before 1st November, 1928, clear possession, for the purpose of sale, of the lands forming portion of the deceased man's estate, of which, it appeared, the defendant had been in occupation for some time.

Mr. J. P. O'Reilly (instructed by Mr. T. O'Shea) appeared for the appellant; and Mr. T. McDowning (instructed by Messrs. Downing and O'Sullivan) for the respondent.

In support of the appeal it was submitted that this was not a case in which a committal should be made at all; that there was no evidence that the appellant had the money in his possession or control, and that the Circuit Judge had no power to make the committal order under the Debtors (Ireland) Act, 1872, section 5.

For the respondent it was contended that the order had been properly made under the circumstances, and that the appellant had admitted that he had the money in his possession and under his control.

The Court now allowed the appeal, and reversed the committal order with costs, holding unanimously that the Circuit Judge was not empowered to make the order under the provisions of the section of the Act mentioned, and that he should have granted the reasonable application made by the appellant to give him provisional credit for the money which had been found due by him in respect of the use and occupation of the premises. Their lordships also made an order sending the case back to the Circuit Judge to hear and determine the application to be allowed provisional credit for the money.

ADVERTISEMENTS ON A WALL.

TITLE TO DISPLAY.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE JOHNSTON.)

In a case of Vladimir Ivanovitch Martinson and Francis O'Leary, both of 14 Wexford street, Dublin, fish and chip merchants, against Henry Fridberg, of 14 Kenilworth square, Rathmines, boot merchant,

Mr. Joseph O'Connor, K.C. (instructed by Messrs. Reddin and Reddin), on behalf of the plaintiffs, moved for judgment in default of defence. He said that the action was brought for a declaration that the plaintiffs are entitled, without interference by the defendant, to display advertisements to the uninterrupted view of persons using the highway, on the façade of the flank wall of the house 19 Harcourt road, Dublin; to free access to the façade of the wall; to the unrestricted user of the wall; a declaration that a projection lately erected by the defendant by way of addition or shop front to the house 18 Harcourt road constitutes, so far as it extends beyond the pre-existing frontage line of the house along the highway, a nuisance to the plaintiffs, and an injunction for the immediate abatement of the alleged nuisance.

Mr. Justice Johnston said that it was an extraordinary thing that the action was not defended.

Mr. Cawley (instructed by Mr. S. G. Rutherford) said that he appeared for the defendant that day, and he understood that something in the nature of a settlement had been arrived at, and that the only question his lordship would be asked to decide was the question of costs.

Mr. O'Connor said that the defendant had taken down this shop front, and the only question remaining to be dealt with was the question of costs. He wanted the declarations asked for in the statement of claim.

Mr. Justice Johnston made the declarations asked for and allowed the plaintiffs their costs.

FAIRVIEW COLLISION.

SEVERAL APPEALS.

Several appeals were listed for hearing arising out of actions brought in connection with a motor 'bus and tramcar collision that occurred at the junction of the Howth road and the Strand road, near Clontarf, on the 3rd of September, 1926.

The first taken was the appeal by the Dublin United Tramways Company in the action brought by Mrs. Elizabeth Little, of Cuil Mor, Dublin road, Sutton, Co. Dublin, from the judgment of Mr. Justice Hanna at the trial of the action for the plaintiff for £1,750, with costs, in respect of serious personal injuries alleged to have been sustained by the plaintiff, who was a passenger in the "Excellence" 'bus at the time of the collision.

The grounds of the appeal were, amongst others, that there was no evidence to support the findings of the jury; that the finding of the liability of the defendants was against evidence and the weight of evidence, and that the trial was unsatisfactory.

Mr. Price, K.C.; Mr. Fitzgerald, K.C., and Mr. Mooney (instructed by Messrs. Casey, Clay and Collins) appeared for the appellants, the D.U.T. Company; and Mr. Rearden, K.C., and Mr. Marnan (instructed by Messrs. Little and Cullen) for the respondent, Mrs. Little.

Mr. Price had not concluded his opening address when the Court rose.

The further hearing was adjourned until to-day.

NORTHERN IRELAND UNEMPLOYMENT.

BIG INCREASE LAST WEEK.

The number of persons seeking employment through the Employment Exchanges in Northern Ireland last week increased by 1,534.

The increase is due to linen workers engaged on short-time being unemployed; to a trade dispute at a shipyard, and to movements in miscellaneous trades. The total numhber of persons unemployed is 34,555. The percentage of unemployed in the shipbuilding engineering trade group is 17.1; in the flax and linen trade 13.6; tailoring, millinery, etc., 8.6; building trades 19.1, and distributive trades, 12.8.

LISNASKEA MAN'S RIFLE.

At a special Court, which was held at Lisnaskea last Saturday, before Major Dickie, R.M., Arthur Kenny, of Drumsoo, who did not appear, was fined £5 or, in default, two months' imprisonment, for having been in possession of a Martini rifle and a six-chamber revolver without a permit.

Head Constable Connerton said that the accused man was a tailor and had just served a month's imprisonment for stealing clothes. While searching the accused man's house for the clothes he found the rifle and the revolver

INFANT'S BODY IN BOG-HOLE.

MOTHER SENTENCED TO DEATH.

(BEFORE MR. JUSTICE O'BYRNE AND A JURY.)

Mary Anne Keene, a married woman, was found guilty of having murdered her newly-born infant on March 2nd last in County Roscommon, and sentenced to be executed on July 4th.

The Judge said that he was in agreement with the jury's recommendation to mercy and he would have it forwarded to the proper quarter.

Mr. Finlay, who (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted, said that the accused was a married woman who had been living for a time apart from her husband. About the date in question she became an inmate of the County Home, Roscommon, where she was delivered of a male child. When leaving the home subsequently she was seen carrying a parcel. Near her husband's house about midnight on March 2nd the prisoner was found lying in a haggard, but without her infant. In a bog-hole, however, about 150 yards away, the dead body of a child was found, and it would be shown that the act of drowning the child was a very deliberate one, as it was found without a scrap of clothing.

The number of cases of infanticide was becoming too numerous in the courts, and the jury must remember that the law regarded the life of a newly born child with the same jealousy and importance as would be attached to that of an adult.

BORN HEALTHY.

Mrs. Campbell, maternity nurse, Roscommon, gave evidence of having attended the defendant at the County Home. The child was born healthy.

A young man named Muldoon said that after leaving the Home defendant stayed at his place for one night with her child, and left after having had breakfast.

Patrick McGauran, another witness, said that he met the defendant on the road carrying a brown paper parcel. She was in a distressed condition.

Joseph Kennedy deposed to finding the accused woman sleeping beside a hay-rick in his haggard. He offered her shelter in his house for the night and gave her food. She then carried a parcel.

The police evidence showed that the body was found in the water by Patrick Keene, the defendant's husband, who was a witness in the lower court, but was objected to. The accused woman when arrested made a statement admitting that she placed the baby in the water.

Dr. Drury, Carrick-on-Shannon, said that a post-mortem examination revealed the fact that death was due to drowning.

To Mr. Justice O'Byrne—I did not see or examine the prisoner.

Dr. McDermott, who made the post-mortem examination on the body along with the last witness, said that he was of the opinion that the body had been in the water for, perhaps, three weeks. It was not an uncommon thing for women to become mentally unbalanced after confinement.

PRISONER'S EVIDENCE.

The accused woman, in evidence, said that when she arrived at her husband's house she saw no light or heard no movement in the house, and then she went up the road about twenty yards, where she lay down on the roadside and went to sleep. She put the baby beside her, and when she woke up the baby had disappeared. She denied killing the baby. She never told anyone about the disappearance of the baby.

Addressing the jury on behalf of the defendant, Mr. James Murnane said that an important element in law was that of malice or premeditation. They would have to give serious consideration to that feature of the case, and he asked them on the evidence to bring in a verdict of "not guilty."

The Judge said that this was a distressing and unusual case. In the customary sort of infanticide case it was usually an unmarried woman who stood in the dock. The accused woman in this case, however, was a married woman. He reminded the jury that in law there is a presumption of sanity in every charge of crime. The onus of proving insanity rests upon the accused person, and in the absence of such proof they were bound to regard the woman in the dock as sane at the time of the alleged crime.

THE VERDICT.

The jury, after an absence of half an hour, returned with a verdict of "Guilty," with a recommendation to mercy.

The Judge then assumed the black cap and pronounced sentence of death, fixing the date of execution for July 4.

KNIFE ATTACK ON DUBLIN WOMAN.

PENAL SERVITUDE FOR ASSAILANT.

John Carr, a middle-aged man, was indicted on a charge of having, on February 19 last, wounded Mrs. Alice Norton at Kimmage with intent to murder her. There was an alternative charge of maliciously wounding Mrs. Norton.

He was found guilty on both counts and sentenced to four years' penal servitude.

Mr. Finlay, who (instructed by the Chief State Solicitor) prosecuted, said that Mrs. Norton, who lived at Terenure, went out on February 19 to do some shopping, and her way to the village lay through a lane known as "The Green Lane." There she was attacked by a man who had a knife. Mrs. Norton received eleven wounds. Evidence would be given that, although there had been only a description given of the accused man, there could be no question about the identification. In fact, he was at once identified at a parade by Mrs. Norton, who fainted at seeing him, and the accused man when arrested said: "I stabbed the woman all right. I did not know who she was. I lost my head when I saw what I did, and threw the knife away after I stabbed her.

VICTIM'S EVIDENCE.

In her evidence Mrs. Norton said that she was alone when walking towards the Kimmage road when it was still daylight. Coming toards her she saw a man, whose dress she described, and whom she had seen more than once before. Suddenly, when he passed her, the man gave her a blow on the back of the head, and then stabbed her several times in the back. She was knocked down, and, turning round, she saw it was the man who had passed her who had attacked her. He then ran away. She struggled up the lane, and a man who was walking in a field close by brought her to her home. Subsequently, at an identification parade, she picked out the defendant as the man who had attacked her.

THE ARREST.

Mrs. Mulroney, who lives near Mrs. Norton, said that she often had seen the defendant in the Green lane, and occasionally he called to her house. A few days after the stabbing incident she saw the defendant in the lane, and she went immediately to Terenure Guards Station, and the man was arrested.

The injuries sustained by Mrs. Norton were described by Dr. A. Stoney.

Sergeant Molloy, Terenure Station, deposed to arresting the prisoner and taking a statement from him. The accused man asked was the woman dead. In the station, when searched, two razors were found on the accused.

Sergeant McCurtin corroborated the evidence of the last witness, and added that when the defendant was left in his company for about five minutes on the way back to the station after arrest, the defendant said to witness: "I need not have told that sergeant anything if I did not like."

A COBBLER'S KNIFE.

Daniel Brady deposed to finding a cobbler's knife in the Green lane.

Charging the jury, Mr. Justice O'Byrne said that a statement, to carry any weight, must be made free and voluntarily; but, if the jury thought for a moment that the statement had been secured through threat, then they were not to allow the statement made by the defendant to interfere with their decision.

The jury returned a verdict of "Guilty" on both counts.

Sentencing the accused man as stated, the Judge said that the offence was an extremely serious one. It was clear that the prisoner had attempted to murder Mrs. Norton.

OLD MAN'S PLAINT.

FINED FOR BREAKING WINDOW IN DUBLIN UNION.

(BEFORE MR. COLLINS.)

John Daly, an aged and poorly-dressed man, of no business and no permanent address, was charged with breaking four panes of glass, valued at 6s., in one of the windows of the Dublin Union last Saturday.

Mr. John J. Judd, assistant master of the Union, said that the defendant had been an annoyance to the officials for years. He would neither stay inside nor outside of the institution.

The defendant said that he had been up all night on Friday minding patients in the hospital, and was made work again on Saturday. He broke the glass as a protest.

The Justice imposed a fine of 5s., and ordered the defendant to pay 6s. compensation for the glass, or go to prison for seven days.

DRUNK IN CHARGE OF HACKNEY CAR.

JARVEY'S LAPSE AFTER FORTY-SEVEN YEARS.

Charles Hand was charged with being drunk while in charge of a horse and hackney car on the Inchicore road last Sunday evening.

Guard A 106 stated that the defendant had two passengers on his car, the horse attached to which had fallen on the road. The defendant was drunk at the time.

The defendant said that he had been driving for the last forty-seven years, and not one of the police had ever charged him before.

The Justice imposed a fine of 15s., with a week to pay.

BACK TO PRISON.

MAN WHO NEGLECTED HIS THREE CHILDREN.

William O'Hanlon, aged about 43 years and described as a labourer, with an address in Coventry, was charged with neglecting his three children.

Mr. E. H. Burne, solicitor, appeared on behalf of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children.

Detective Quinn gave evidence of taking the accused man into custody in Coventry on June 8th.

Mr. Burne said that this was one of the worst cases with which the Society had to deal. Already the defendant had served two sentences of six months each on similar charges.

The Justice imposed a sentence of six months' imprisonment.

GUARD USES HIS BATON.

COURT SEQUEL TO STREET SCENES.

Patrick O'Toole, whose head was bandaged, was charged with disorderly conduct, with resisting arrest, and assaulting Guard 50B.

The Guard stated that he was on duty in Lombard street between 9 and 10 p.m. last Saturday, and observed two men coming towards him, one being the prisoner. O'Toole was using obscene language and refused to give his name and address. Witness took him into custody, and the man resisted, striking witness on the stomach, tripping him and knocking him down. He then ran away in the direction of Westland row, and when overtaken again escaped and bolted towards Townsend street, where a hostile crowd collected, and knocked witness down. Witness was obliged to draw his baton, and aiming a blow at O'Toole's arm, accidentally struck O'Toole on the head. Assistance arrived and the prisoner was taken into custody.

Cross-examined by Mr. Campbell, witness said that O'Toole was knocked unconscious and was conveyed to hospital. Witness did not use unnecessary force.

Guard 210B gave evidence of going to the assistance of Guard 50B, and of the hostility of the crowd.

The prisoner giving evidence, alleged that the Guard challenged him, handled him roughly, knocked him down and struck him with his baton.

A witness named O'Doherty stated that he saw the Guard seize O'Toole and knock him down. He did not hear O'Toole make use of obscene language.

John Kerin stated that he came on the scene to see O'Toole bleeding from the head and the Guard in the act of kicking him in the stomach. The Guard had a baton in his hand.

John Boshell was charged with the attempted rescue of O'Toole, and with assaulting Guard 50B by kicking him.

The accused man alleged that he was pushed in on the Guard by the crowd and accidentally kicked Guard 50B.

O'Toole was fined in sums of 6s. for obscene language, 40s.. for assault, and 5s. for resisting arrest.

Boshell was fined 40s.

WASTE OF WATER.

Mrs. Helen Dixon, 24 Carlyle street, South Circular road, Dublin, was summoned for allowing waste of water at a house her property, 70 Shelbourne road, Ballsbridge.

The case was proved by Mr. John Govan, an official of the Pembroke Urban Council.

INTERRUPTED FUNERAL IN CO. ANTRIM.

BODY TO BE EXAMINED BY PUBLIC ANALYST.

An inquest was opened at Ballymena yesterday on the body of Thomas Sloan (aged 74), of Broughshane, near Ballymena, whose funeral was postponed last Sunday by the instructions of the police.

On the application of District Inspector Small, who said that he wanted the body examined by the Public Analyst, the inquest was adjourned for eight days, after evidence of identification had been given.

Thomas Sloan, son of the deceased man, said that he last saw his father (who died at the residence of his married daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth McAuley, Broughshane) on May 28th last, and the only peculiar thing he noticed about him was that he was white in the face.

RATHMINES ELECTRICITY UNDERTAKING.

AUDIT OPENED.

An extraordinary audit of the accounts of the Electricity Department of the Rathmines and Rathgar Urban District Council for the period ended March 28 last, when the undertaking was taken over by the Electricity Supply Board, was opened in the Rathmines Town Hall yesterday, in the presence of Mr. Seacombe Mason, Town Clerk, and Mr. Crawford, Rate Collector. SPEED OF MOTOR CARS IN DERRY.

CALL FOR ACTION TO PROTECT PEDESTRIANS.

At the meeting of the General Purposes Committee of the Derry Corporation yesterday Councillor Algeo complained of the speed of motor cars, and said that the time now had come for some definite steps to be taken in order to protect pedestrians and school children from the motor "hogs" on the King's highway. He considered that the Northern Ministry of Home Affairs should be pressed to deal with these "speed kings."

The Spanish aviators, Captain Jimenez and Captain Iglesias, who accomplished the trans-Atlantic flight, were invited yesterday to lunch with the King of Spain, who congratulated them and kissed them on both cheeks.

"COMPLETELY DELIGHTED . . . . AN EXCELLENT CAR"

Owners express unanimous approval of this improved Vauxhall

The way owners write of this new Vauxhall! "In every way I am pleased with the car, which has not given a moment's trouble." "I am completely delighted with my Vauxhall." So definite! So frankly enthusiastic!

"My wife says the car is perfect." "So amazingly easy to handle that I hardly ever have my chauffeur drive it for me." "It is an excellent car." Phrases like these abound in letters from Vauxhall owners.

"It is splendidly equal to any kind of road condition." "Its wonderful brakes—the best in any car I have ever driven." "The controls can all be operated without any effort at all." "The car's smoothness and silence are delightful, and it is most comfortable." Every point that contributes to efficiency, comfort and ease of driving is found by owners to be a feature of the improved Vauxhall.

For in this car it is quite easy to keep up a high average speed under today's difficult conditions. Seventy miles an hour when you need it—brakes that make such a speed safe—suspension that makes it comfortable.

SOME BUSINESS TRANSACTIONS.

(By GEORGE HUBAND.)

Of the many biographers of Jonathan Swift, few have referred more than casually to the numerous legal transactions in which he was engaged during his lifetime, though an examination of these certainly affords a view of him and his friends in a capacity distinct from religion, politics and literature. The Dean had quite a number of dealings in connection with real estate, and, to judge by the value of his possessions at the time of his death, he managed to gather unto himself a fair competence. The names of some of the various parties associated with these transactions suffice to engage attention.

On the 6th February, 1717, Esther Johnson, of the City of Dublin, spinster, for the sum of £65 purchased from one John Blakeley, of Rochestown, Co. Meath, the house and premises, known as "Talbot's Castle," in the town of Trim; and in the ensuing month of May, for the evidently fictitious consideration of £200, she transferred this property to Jonathan Swift, "for ever to his and their own proper use and behoof." Later, in the month of November, the Dean, in return for £223, conveyed the premises to George Dennis, of Summerhill, Co. Meath. Here was a series of transactions by means of which the Dean, acting on behalf of "Stella," secured to her the very satisfactory profit of £158—the original outlay of £65, being, no doubt, a venture undertaken on his advice.

The witness to Esther Johnson's signature was her life-long friend, "Rec. Dingley," the ever-present third party at the meetings of the Dean and Stella. The neatly written signature, "Jon. Swift," was witnessed by Alec. McGee, his servant man, a tablet to whom, erected by his master to set forth his "discretion, fidelity and diligence," may be seen in St. Patrick's Cathedral. Talbot's Castle, the subject of the above transaction, was erected in 1415 by Sir John Talbot, Lord Lieutenant. During the later years of the eighteenth century it came to be used as a school-house, famous in after times as having had a pupil known as Arthur Wellesley, and subsequently as the Duke of Wellington.

"FIRST FRUITS."

Much of the time covered by the period, 1707-11, was spent by Swift at London in his efforts to secure for the Irish Church the benefit of the contribution, known as "First Fruits"—then payable to the Crown. After many disappointments and delays the object was at last attained (February, 1711), when "Her Gracious Majesty Queen Anne, for the encouragement and increase of piety, by Letters Patent in the Great Seal, did grant unto the several archbishops and bishops of this kingdom, and other persons therein named as trustees or commissioners, all the First Fruits issuing out of the ecclesiastical benefices and payable by the clergy, for the purpose of purchasing glebes and impropriations."

Consequent to this (1716), Dr. Swift, as Vicar of Laracor, presented to the trustees a memorial setting forth that the said parish was of the yearly value of about £126, that there was but one acre of glebe belonging thereto, and that one John Percival, of Knightstown, Co. Meath, was willing to sell twenty acres of the lands of Nealestown, adjacent to the said one acre of glebe, for the sum of £200. Thereupon the trustees assented to the purchasing by the said Dr. Swift, of the said twenty acres, which, together with the one acre of ancient glebe, were to be held and enjoyed by Dr. Swift and his successors for ever as the glebe of the Parish Church of Laracor. This effort by the Dean towards the betterment of his little parish was, in addition to the rebuilding of the parsonage, the repairing of the church, and the general discharge of his parochial duties in an exemplary manner. The witness to the document securing the new glebe was the Rev. Anthony Raymond.

RAYMOND'S GRATITUDE.

Dr. Anthony Raymond, Vicar of Trim, was a man rich in that he possessed the friendship of Jonathan Swift, but, owing to natural prodigality as regards worldly wealth, poor and necessitous. Though he was incredibly vain, his associations with Swift were so close that it was to his house that Stella and Mrs. Dingley retired during the frequent absences of the Dean. The ineptitude shown by Dr. Raymond in the matter of the proper handling of money made application for loans a matter of frequency, and both Stella and Swift were approached on some of these occasions. On June 14th, 1718, Swift advanced to Raymond £150 on the security of the Rectory of Effernock, Co. Meath, with the impropriate tithes thereof, while on the same day Stella made a loan to Raymond of a similar sum on the security of property in Patrick street and Cullenswood, Dublin. Some years later, in return for further monetary accommodation, all this property passed into full possession of the mortgagees—Esther Johnson and Jonathan Swift. Dr. Raymond was not forgetful of the frequent kindness of the Dean, and, as a mark of esteem, bequeathed "a gold ring to his friend, Reverend Jonathan Swift."

During the years in which the foregoing transactions were being carried through, Hester Van Homrigh ("Vanessa") and her sister Mary (Moll) also were engaged in operations transferring lands and premises. Bartholomew Van Homrigh, a gentleman of Dutch descent, Lord Mayor of Dublin, and a prime favourite of William III.—who conferred on him the office of Commissary-General of the Army—had succeeded in acquiring some landed estate in this country. At his death this passed to the use of his wife and to that of his children—Hester Ginkel, Bartholomew, and Mary. Owing to differences which arose as to the settlement, it became necessary for Parliament to step in and by Act appoint trustees, in the persons of Alderman John Pearson and Peter Partinton, for and on behalf of the young girls.

PROVOST PRATT.

It would seem that, about 1716, the ladies required some cash in hand, as in that year they, with the concurrence of the trustees, conveyed to one Hugh Henry 335 acres of the lands of Barberstown, Co. Kildare, for the substantial sum of £2,252 10s., thus securing requisite relief, if any relief was required. One of the witnesses to this transaction was the Rev. Ben. Pratt, Provost of Trinity College, a divine who has left behind him the reputation of having failed to secure that degree of discipline and decorum which is so necessary for the proper administration of a university. Otherwise he was such a good fellow—Father O'Flynn-like—as to have been a most welcome acquisition to every gathering in all and every of the taverns and coffee-houses then abounding in the city. His love for Trinity was shown, however, in a clause in his will, by which he bequeathed £1,000 thereto—a portion of which sum was in later years used towards the expense incurred in erecting the present dining hall.

In 1719, Hester and Moll, then freed from the control of trustees, leased to one Nathan Ellison, of St. Andrew street, brewer, premises standing on the east side of Hawkins Key, for a rent fixed at £65 per annum, but subject to an abatement of £5 in the likelihood of the lessee losing "the half-brewing for Trinity College." The probability of the ladies being deprived of that £5 must have been remote, however, for, provided that the brew was kept to standard, it was most unlikely that the Provost and Fellows would go "dry." Tea and coffee were then luxuries, porter and stout still in the womb of time, and the present great concern at St. James's Gate was but a small brewery, carried on by one Paul Espinasse, and engaged entirely in the manufacture of nut-brown ale for consumption by a limited clientèle.

After the hasty visit of Swift to Kildrought, when Vanessa imprudently had sought from Stella information as to whether she was or was not the wife of the Dean, it can be taken that, if Vanessa had intended to remember Swift in her will, the fatal interview dispelled any such idea. She died within a few months of this last meeting, and by will dated the 1st May, 1723, bequeathed all her worldly substance whatsoever unto the Rev. Dr. George Berkeley, F.,T.C.D., and Robert Marshall, of Clonmel.

Berkeley—a stranger to Vanessa—was "a philosopher with regard to money, titles and power," and welcomed this windfall only as a help towards forwarding his "Scheme for Converting the Savage Americans to Christianity by a College erected in the Summer Islands, otherwise called the Isles of Bermuda." As is well known, the venture failed, and in addition to the legacy, which amounted to many thousands of pounds, other money of the good Doctor was lost irretrievably. The second beneficiary, Marshall—with whom Vanessa had a very slight acquaintance—seems to have flourished from the time when he succeeded to this fortune. Within a few months he was called to the Bar, where he showed such aptitude as a lawyer that later he was elevated to the Bench as Chief Justice of Common Pleas.

A LINK WITH GRATTAN.

On the 6th July, 1723, Alderman John Pearson, Peter Partinton, Dr. Berkeley, Robert Marshall and Bartholomew Partinton Van Homrigh, as executors of Hester, for a sum of £800, assigned the lease of the house and lands at Kildrought to Thomas Marlay, Solicitor-General for Ireland, thus transferring to a stranger the lawns and nooks through which Swift and Vanessa had strayed.

Two other items may be brought to memory here. Mary, daughter of Thomas Marlay, the new occupant of Kildrought—who, like Thomas Marshall, later occupied a seat on the Bench as Chief Justice—married James Grattan, Recorder of Dublin, and with her firstborn gave to Irish politics and history a protagonist in the person of Henry Grattan. With the death of Hester the family of Van Homrigh, at least as regards the Irish branch thereof, became extinct. However, by a clause in the will of her brother, Bartholomew, it had been provided that Bartholomew, son of Peter Partinton above-mentioned, should succeed as his heir on the condition that he assumed the surname Van Homrigh; and it is due to this provision that the name Van Homrigh has been bequeathed to later times.

The Rev. Thomas Sheridan was one of the innermost circle of friends of Jonathan Swift, and it was to his house at Quilca that the Dean frequently retired during his declining years, in order to escape the toil and tumult of the metropolis and to seek relief from the more frequently recurring attacks of giddiness to which he had become subject. Like others, Dr. Sheridan experienced the Dean's kindliness of heart in his readiness to afford monetary accommodation to needy friends. By the year 1736 his indebtedness in this respect stood at the sum of £668, as security for which he handed the Dean mortgages on his property at Quilca, Blencoop and other places in Co. Cavan. However, the Doctor was able to repay the money within a short time, or else was forgiven the debt, as appears by a discharge thereof signed by the Dean, 5th January, 1736 (O.S.).

AN EXCITING RACE.

The letters of Sheridan to Swift in connection with the transactions are highly interesting reading, as, in addition to the matter in hand, they touch on a variety of other topics. For instance, he informs the Dean of the "diabolical proceedings of that monster," his wife, in endeavouring to marry their daughter to a noted fop of the time. In another letter he writes: "They say Mrs. Whiteway rid your mare at the Curragh and won the plate. They say the Primate's lady rid against her, and that Mrs. Whiteway, by way of weight, carried the Bishop of Down and Connor behind her. Pray let me know the truth of this?" It would be a matter of much interest to learn if the archives of the Turf Club contain any confirmation of the carrying through of such a rare and exciting match.

Dr. Sheridan is now principally remembered as having been the grandfather of Richard Brinsley Sheridan. He was also that Royal Chaplain who, when commanded to preach on either the occasion of the King's Birthday or the anniversary of the accession of the House of Hanover, was guilty of an unforgivable faux pas in selecting for his text, "Sufficient unto the day is the evil thereof." Thus he forfeited his chaplaincy and his right of access to Court circles.

Mrs. Whiteway, as to whose success as an equestrienne Dr. Sheridan showed such eager curiosity, was a cousin of Jonathan Swift, being a daughter of his uncle Adam, and was twice widowed. For many years she had the privilege of looking after the Deanery in Kevin street during the absence of the Dean, and is said to have been the last person recognised by him prior to his loss of reason, and one of the few recognised when, some short time before his death, he regained some degree of normality. She had acted as his amanuensis and was his constant attendant and companion in his declining years. That Swift was grateful to this lady, and wished his gratitude to take a practical form, is shown by a grant, dated 1737, whereby, in consideration of love and affection, he transferred to Martha Whiteway a mortgage debt of £300 secured to him on lands belonging to Dr. Sheridan in the County of Cavan. Swift made provision in his will for John Whiteway, son of Martha, directing that he was to be brought up as a surgeon; and a sum of £100, out of the arrears of his church livings, was paid to Mrs. Whiteway towards the fulfilment of this purpose, as well as £5 for buying such "physical and chirurgical books" as might be necessary. John Whiteway rose to eminence as a surgeon in the latter half of the eighteenth century.

A CONTESTED SUIT.

Willoughby Swift, a Lisbon merchant, was the cousin who befriended Jonathan when in his early days he needed pecuniary help, and by such action was directly responsible for awakening in Jonathan a wholesome spirit of thrift and carefulness. About the year 1700, Willoughby, with the object of providing for his daughter, Hanna, entrusted to his brother, Mr. Deane Swift, of Co. Meath, the sum of £330 7s. 6d., and later other sums towards that end. Dean Swift in his will (1713), "being minded to make provision for payment of said money," states that he had paid Hannah £41 13s. 4d. and provided £150 for her on marriage, and an annual sum of £100 for eight years, and requested his heirs to pay said sums or whatever were owing at his death.

His widow and executor, Elizabeth, neglected so to do, and it was left to the Rev. Stafford Lightburne, of Trim, who had taken Hannah to wife, to press for payment of her fortune. His efforts in that direction being of no avail, legal proceedings became necessary and ultimately reached the Irish House of Lords, which, as a result of the appeal, confirmed the decree of the Court of Exchequer for £1,097 18s. against Elizabeth Swift and her son Deane Swift, and their property at Castle Rickard. In 1726 the Rev. S. Lightburne, requiring ready money, applied to Dr. Jonathan for the loan of £800, which was duly advanced on the security of the charge on Castlerickard. In the following year, by means of a further advance of £297 18s. 1d., made through the Rev. John Worrall, the Dean became absolute owner of the charge, which, together with loans subsequently made to Mr. Deane Swift, left the latter indebted to Jonathan in a sum of £2,000.

On the 11th December of that year a deed in connection with this matter was entered into, and the terms thereof were to the following effect:—The tenant of the lands, one George Nugent, was to pay an annual sum of £120 to Jonathan Swift, while Dean Swift was to be paid annually £220, reducible to £200 on the death of his mother. This arrangement seems to have been entirely satisfactory to the Dean, as in a note to his legal adviser, Eaton Stannard (who had declined to accept a fee in consideration of the support previously afforded him by Swift when he was a candidate for the Recordership), Swift writes: "Last night the deeds were read and signed by me, my creditor and his tenant, by which I shall be richer a hundred and twenty pounds a year and thereby able to give you a fee and a friend a bottle of wine more than usual."

The Rev. John Worrall, mentioned in connection with the last series of transactions, was Swift's vicar at St. Patrick's, and for many years his intimate and trusted friend. During Swift's many sojourns in the country Worrall kept him informed as to all happenings of interest and importance, and catered for his bodily wants by welcome gifts. "I thank you for the purchase of Bristol beer. It will soon pay for itself by saving me many a bottle of wine, but I am afraid it is not good for your gout"—so runs one of many such homely notes.

As Registrar of St. Patrick's, it was the sad duty of John Worrall to make entry of the fact that the unquiet spirit of the greatest genius of his age had passed from earth.

"PYGMALION."

SHAW PLAY AT THE GAIETY THEATRE.

So G. B. S. is becoming very popular! He must feel about his popularity as Alfred Doolittle felt about his wealth or Henry Higgins about Eliza—intimidated and embarrassed. However, and whatever, G. B. S. may feel about it, his plays are now popular enough in his native city to fill its biggest theatre. Thus every visit of the Macdona Players shows bigger and more enthusiastic audiences. Last night the Gaiety Theatre re-echoed to the laughter of a packed house as Eliza Doolittle and Professor Henry Higgins treaded their way through the intricacies of "Pygmalion."

Fifteen years ago "Pygmalion" was the sensation of the year—but that was fifteen years ago, as Mr. C. K. Munro's Miss Shee would say. So much has happened since 1914 that the word that shocked an audience then makes it laugh now, even in Dublin. When Eliza Doolittle used the word that shattered sensitive ears in the past, the audience in the Gaiety Theatre last night rocked with mirth. The lessons of the play? What did they matter, since all are equal now?

"The difference between a flower-girl and a duchess is not in how she behaves, but in how she is treated." In this statement of Eliza's is one of the problems not yet solved. Eliza grew from the flower-girl under the portico of the Church of St. Paul, Covent Garden, to the "duchess" of the Royal Garden Party. She was a success, and she won the wager for the Professor; but in her success she humanised him. The tremendous thing about this fifteen-year-old play is its vitality; it is no more stale to-day than it was in 1914—humbug has still to be pricked with aseptic needles.

In this company the acting of Mr. Vernon Sylvaine, as Professor Higgins, stands supreme. In Act 4, the scene between himself and Eliza could not be improved upon, and never has it been so perfectly presented in Dublin. To the Eliza Doolittle of Miss Leah Bateman we are now so accustomed that we expect perfection; last night she did not disappoint us. Alfred Doolittle, whether as the "undeserving poor" or as the "intimidated rich," found sympathetic feeling in Mr. Wilfrid Lawson. In Mr. George Larchet's Colonel Pickering a Dublin audience would admire an old favourite, and in Miss Patience Rignold the stately qualities of Mrs. Higgins found adequate expression.

To-night at 8: "Man and Superman."

"IN OLD ARIZONA" AT THE CAPITOL THEATRE.

Another example of the sound film is being presented this week at the Capitol Theatre, Dublin, and the large crowds which have patronised the opening performances show that the public interest in this new form of entertainment is still very great. "In Old Arizona" is the first sound film made by the Fox Film Company, and is an endeavour to utilise the new method for open-air scenes. It is, frankly, nothing but an experiment, and as such it may be described as a fair success.

The action takes place in the Arizona of a generation ago, complete with cattle "rustlers," a stage coach "hold-up," and all the impedimenta of a Bret Harte story. The Cisco Kid, a sort of Western Dick Turpin, is quite a likeable villain in contrast with the egotistical military sergeant whose task it is to hunt him down. Both are victims of the wiles of a dark Spanish beauty of decidedly "vampish" ways, some of whose scenes might with advantage be sub-edited.

In the indoor scenes the voices "come through" fairly well, though one has to have a quick ear to catch some of the continual repartee. The big experiment is in trying to reproduce the sounds of the open air scenes, and in places this has been well done. For instance, there is the creak and jolt of the old stage coach as it starts off on its hazardous journey through the hills, and, later, the sharp gallop of horses; but the most realistic touch is achieved when, cutting across the dialogue, there comes the braying of a jackass. In a cattle "rustling" scene, too, the lowing of the cattle is very naturally reproduced, and one gets quite the atmosphere of the drive. Other homely sounds are the crowing of a cock, the cackle of hens, and the frantic squealing of a pig caught in a hedge.

On the stage Mr. Billy Coomber repeats most successfully his number "Roses of Yesterday," which was so well received last week. He also sings an old favourite, "Chloe." The Capitol Tiller Girls contribute a very clever song and dance ensemble, "Me and the Moon," and Alec Fryer and his Capitolian Band complete a pleasant programme with selections from "Maritana."

"SONNY BOY."

AMUSING REVUE AT THEATRE ROYAL.

The Hurley Productions last evening at the Theatre Royal, Dublin, presented "Sonny Boy," an interesting revue, to two "houses," which, for this season of the year, with its long daylight and outdoor allurements, must be regarded as very satisfactory. The show is made up of numerous dances by a troupe of well-trained girls, but good as this feature of the programme may be, one feels disposed to think that it is being overdone in these entertainments. There are, however, many admirable scenes in the play, in which Jimmy Bryant, the leading comedian, is very amusing in his drollery and tricky mannerisms. He is well supported by Lionel Scott, a humorist of another type, and by Lily Hartley, a comedienne, whose share in the performance deserves special mention.

Then there is Derek Victor, a first-class vocalist, whose songs make a special appeal. Reg. Graham and Gertie Kendal are artistic dancers, and Claire is an outstanding figure in the terpsichorean line. The part of "Sonny Boy" is entrusted to Wee Billy Scott, a precocious youth, whose acting and singing, no doubt, yet will lead him to the front rank. The Crackerjacks Band discourses a choice selection of music.

Belfast Revisited.

A correspondent writes:—I spent an agreeable week's-end in Belfast, and travelled north with a trainful of visitors to the meetings of the General Assembly. One good minister was telling tales of the lighter side of life in the manse.

He said that the children at a certain Sunday school recently were asked to put pennies in a missionary box in turn, every child to recite a verse of Scripture as he or she made the contribution. "Freely ye have received, freely give," said the first, and the second had something equally apposite to quote until it came to the last.

This last was a little lad whose Scriptural knowledge seemed a little hazy in its bounds. He put his penny in the box and said: "A fool and his money are soon parted."

Celtic Craftsmanship.

I had the pleasure of inspecting some of the admirable Celtic craftwork in which Belfast excels, and of which Miss Edith Macdermott is a leading exponent. Miss MacDermott told me that this kind of work is appreciated highly throughout the North by people of all classes. Among its patrons are the Duchess of Abercorn and Lady Londonderry, both of whom of late have purchased liberally the work of Belfast silversmiths with the true Celtic interlacing and jewelling.

LADY LONDONDERRY.

Lady Londonderry showed herself quite a connoisseur, and would not be satisfied with a brooch of the Tara design unless it fastened with its own pin in the antique style, instead of being mounted on a concealed pin in the manner of much modern work that passes for Celtic. Lady Londonderry acquired her taste for Celtic ornamentation in Scotland; and, by the way, her recently-published book, "The Magic Inkpot," is a fantasy which reveals in its author no mean knowledge of Celtic lore.

A Hint to Collectors.

Often one meets people who are collectors of novel objects Glass marbles have come into fashion of late, and if you have any of the coloured "alleys" of your youth lying in the bottom of an old trunk, you can sell them to-day for big prices.

I have hit upon a new object for collection. The rice-paper wrappers in which oranges arrive in these countries are as well worthy of attention as, say, cigarette pictures or postcards. Sancho Panza is the emblematic figure printed in colours on the wrappers from Spain which most abound at present, and I am ready to "swap" three good specimens for a Don Quixote; for my Quixote specimen is lost.

The latest specimen in my collection, however, is particularly interesting. It comes from Sagunto, Valencia; it carries a picture of a football match, and on a scroll across the top is the name José MaCoIl. May we assume that Señor MaColl is a Spaniard of Irish stock?

Miss Iris Barry.

An interesting visitor to Dublin this week is Miss Iris Barry, the well-known London journalist, film critic and authoress. Few people know so much about the inside and outside of the film industry as Miss Barry. On the strength of her visit to Hollywood, and her long experience as film critic to one of the biggest London dailies, she published some time ago a very interesting and witty book called "Let's Go to the Pictures." It threw an exceedingly penetrating searchlight on the film world, and caused a distinct sensation in Hollywood, especially among the "beautiful but dumb sisterhood." Miss Barry was the first critic with the moral courage to come out in the open and say that she preferred acting ability and personality to mere beauty every time.

MISS I. BARRY.

Her next book, "Lady Mary," a charming biography of "The Queen of the Blues," Lady Mary Wortley-Montagu, attracted very favourable attention from the critics that count, and she followed it up with a scholarly and graceful preface to the reprinted memoirs of Laetitia Pilkington, of Swift's memory. Iris Barry has a very close sympathy with the eighteenth century. Indeed, she is somewhat eighteenth century herself in many ways; for she has a very pretty wit, writes what Fanny Burney would call an elegant letter—an accomplishment that is exceedingly rare nowadays—is a most brilliant conversationalist, and, curiously enough, lives in a charming old Queen Anne house in Bloomsbury, where she gives delightful parties. By the way, she is Mrs. Arthur Porter in private life, and her husband is a literary critic of some renown. Miss Barry has just finished a novel, which I am not allowed to say much about, except that it is to be published very soon. She is coming to Dublin for a much-needed rest.

Lord Webb?

Only a few weeks ago it was announced, with every appearance of authenticity, that Mr. Sidney Webb had retired definitely from politics and would undertake a world tour, during which he was to spend a considerable time in India and China. Now it is known that Mr. Webb is to be Secretary of State for the Dominions and Colonies in Mr. Macdonald's Ministry, and that he is to be accommodated with a seat in the House of Lords. His long and arduous public service would entitle him to the honour of a Peerage, and at seventy years of age he would be entitled to rest on his great achievements in historical studies and public administration.

Evidently he has been induced to change his mind about retirement, and it would not be difficult to discover the reason for the change. Throughout his life he has been making suggestions for the solution of the unemployment problem, and in the famous Minority Report of the Poor Law Commission, published over twenty years ago as "The Break-up of the Poor Law," he offered his first scheme. This was followed almost immediately by an elaboration under the title "The Prevention of Destitution." Then, in 1916, he edited the Report of the Fabian Research Committee on "How to Pay for the War." In this last named work is an elaborate scheme of development which includes post office, railways, canals, coal mines, insurance and income tax.

The Clonmel Goose.

The Rev. E. Savell Hicks told a story at the Blue Cross Association meeting last week that he asserted to be crusted with age, but it may be new to some readers. In Clonmel long ago a hen with ducklings that had taken to water for the first time was giving the hysterical demonstration customary on such occasions on the bank of the pond. A goose, interested in the row, drew near to where the agonised foster mother was prancing and cackling. The hen spread her wings and landed on the goose's back. Whether of its own accord or under orders from the hen, it is not known, the goose swam to the part of the pond where the ducklings were disporting themselves. The hen superintended operations until her brood saw fit to return to dry land. From that day, the story runs, the goose used to await the arrival of the hen and her family at the edge of the pond, and the ducklings indulged in the sport dear to their natures under the surveillance of the hen from her point of vantage on the goose's back.

Dublin Street Noises.

Some time ago one of my correspondents drew attention to the noises of Lower Abbey street in the evening. I have now experienced the horrors of the street myself.

The other evening I was endeavouring to listen attentively to the beautiful verse of An Philibin's play, "Tristram and Iseult," at the Peacock Theatre, but the noises of the street below were so loud and so persistent that I almost gave up the effort in despair. So persistent and deafening were the noises that I began to believe that all the 'buses in the city were passing down the street. The short silence would be cut sharply by the piercing shriek of a Klaxon, the shrill grinding of brakes would follow quickly, then loud explosions from an engine, and occasionally all three would combine to torture the ear. There was a motor cyclist who seemed to be trying how much noise he could make with his engine, and as he seemed to have no desire to leave the street, his performance continued for well over an hour.

The little theatre has several large windows looking upon the street, and is thus at the mercy of all the din of that busy thoroughfare. As it is close to the junction of Marlborough street with Abbey street there is a continuous din throughout the evening. This noise spoils the theatre; its intimate quality is ruined; but surely something could be done to divert the more noisy motor traffic thorugh Beresford place? It is not the roadway itself that is noisy, it is the honking and hooting and roaring of the motor vehicles, and this could be eased by closing portion of the street for a few hours every evening while the theatre is in use.

More Haste, Less Speed.

When describing in Monday's Diary my motoring adventure in Co. Kildare, I might have added another that turned on the difference between Irish and English miles. I was driving from Leenane in Co. Galway one autumn day a few years ago and hoped to make Sligo before nightfall.

Some time after I had left Ballina, I saw a signpost on the road which said: "Sligo, fourteen miles." My heart rose; for I reckoned that my lights would hold out for this distance. On I drove; but after a time I saw another signpost, and it said: "Sligo, seventeen miles!" Yet I was driving steadily eastward.

I thought of the men in the story who asked at the roadside again and again how far it was to Sligo, and always were told (in the offhand Irish way) five miles. "Let us be thankful, at least, that we are not losing ground," said one of them.

My plight seemed to be worse than theirs; for here I was palpably losing ground if the signposts did not lie. The explanation, however, was simple. The first signpost had been in Co. Mayo and reckoned the distance in Irish miles. The second had been across the border of Co. Sligo, where the reckoning was taken up in English measure. I was less than fourteen Irish miles and more than seventeen English miles from my destination.

Light Entertainment.

As an Irishman, I naturally have the greatest admiration for the Royal Irish Academy, but I must say that I could imagine more entertaining ways of spending a summer afternoon than listening to the papers which were read yesterday at a general meeting of the Academy. The "Report from the Fauna and Flora Committee on Recent Additions to the Fauna and Flora of Ireland" sounds as if I might understand bits of it, and I might work up some enthusiasm for the paper on "The Glacial Retreat of Iar Connaught"; but the very names of the others leave me gasping for breath. I award the prize for devastating sonority to the paper which treats of

"3.4—DIMETHOXYBENZYL—
3.5—DIMETHOXYCOUMARANONE."

A slangy young friend to whom I showed this merely said: "I'll have a bob each way on that."

Encore.

A correspondent writes:—I heard an amusing little tale a few days ago told at a missionary meeting—the last place in the world one expects to hear funny stories. A missionary was recounting some of his experiences among the black folk. On one occasion a nigger with musical tastes brought his twin sons to be christened. The proud father gave the names chosen as "Allegro Andante" and "Encore." "But why 'Encore?'" asked the surprised clergyman. "Because he wasn't on the programme," was the reply.

White Rose Day.

I counted it appropriate that I should have received, on June 10th, a book that now lies before me—"The Lives of the Third and Fifth Earls of Derwentwater" (Hutchinson, 21s. net). As every reader knows, June 10th is kept as "White Rose Day," and is commemorated still by those who cherish a regard for the old lost Jacobite cause.

Of all the days that's in the year
The tenth of June we love so dear,
When our white roses will appear
For the sake of Janie the Rover.

White Rose Day originated in the birthday of the Old Pretender, who was proclaimed King at St. Germain's after the death of James II. Major Francis Skeet, author of the book before me, says that pious souls still place wreaths of white roses on the tombs of "the three last Stuart Kings" in the crypt of St. Peter's, in Rome.

Major Skeet's book is an eloquent account of two noted champions of the Jacobite cause. It will be remembered that the Earls of Derwentwater perished on the scaffold, one after "the '15" and the other after "the '45." Major Skeet, by the way, joined the 4th Royal Dublin Fusiliers in 1889 and served many years with the regiment.

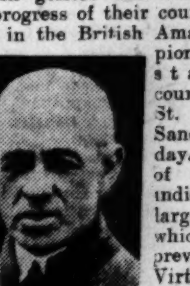
Lord Kitchener's Home.

Still the sale of the big houses of England continues. One of the estates shortly to come up for sale is Broome Park, near Canterbury, the Kentish home of the late Earl Kitchener, who purchased it in 1911 and spent much time there until the mid-summer of 1914. The old mansion is surrounded by about seven hundred acres of land, which was laid out as a park as long ago as 1634. The late owner's coat-of-arms and his motto, "Thorough," are emblazoned on the stone fire-places in the great hall, and on the ceiling of the diningroom.

Lord Kitchener spent much of his leisure time collecting antiques for Broome Park which held a special place in his affections, his full title being Earl Ktchener of Khartoum and of Broome.

The Amateur Golf Title.

Irish golfers will watch with interest the progress of their country's representatives in the British Amateur Golf Championship, which started on the course of the Royal St. George's Club at Sandwich yesterday. The popularity of the event is indicated by the large entry of 253, which exceeds all previous "records." Virtually all the leading amateur golfers of the day will take part in the contest, the favourites being Mr. C. J. H. Tolley, who played well in the Open Championship; Mr. Wethered, Dr. Tweddell and Mr. Harris.



DR. MACCORMACK.

Mr. D. Wilson Smyth, a former Irish open champion; Dr. J. D. MacCormack, of the Hermitage Club, and Major Hezlet (Royal Portrush) are among the seven representatives of Irish clubs who will be taking part.

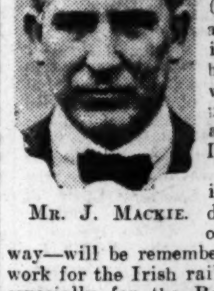
Cinematograph Music.

I hear that the advent of the talking film is likely to occasion a good deal of unemployment among musicians. In some cities, where picture theatres are installing the new apparatus, orchestras are under notice to terminate employment in the near future; for henceforward a pianist will be sufficient for occasional calls, while the greater part of the music will be furnished by the sound film.

Most of the Dublin houses, I am told, are installing the "talkies," and already the engagements, not only of musicians, but of variety performers, are seriously abbreviated. I fear that Dublin in the past has been unkind to its musical talent. The tale is told of a violinist of great talent who received a petty weekly wage in Dublin, and never was given the opportunity to win appreciation by a solo turn. He left the country in disgust, and after a few months he had earned such a name in England that he was being engaged in Dublin for flying visits at a fee for a week equal to what he earned in some months when working at home.

Mr. John Mackie.

I met Mr. John Mackie—looking more like Edgar Wallace than ever—hurrying round Dublin the other day bidding farewell to his many friends; for he recently retired from the great firm of accountants, Messrs. Craig, Gardner and Co., with a view to settling permanently in London. He is leaving one of the most beautifully situated houses in County Dublin for an ultra-modern flat in Kensington; but he assures me that he will find many compensations there for all he loses in leaving Ireland.



MR. J. MACKIE.

Mr. Mackie—who is Deputy Vice-President of the Chamber of Commerce, by the way—will be remembered for his valuable work for the Irish railway companies, and especially for the Railway Stockholders' Protection Association. At one time he was appointed Treasurer of the Central Council of English, Scottish and Irish Railway Stockholders' Protection Associations. The council adopted his booklet, "Danger Ahead for Railway Stockholders," as the basis of its propaganda, and placed the booklet on the railway bookstalls throughout the United Kingdom. Then, too, he served the Free State Government in its first youth well, by pointing a way out of many of its difficulties, and it was he who prepared the scheme for the setting up of a separate Irish Exchequer and Irish Controller and Auditor-General's Department.

John Mackie is looked upon in London, as well as in Dublin, as possessing an extremely keen financial mind. It is a pity, indeed, that Dublin is losing such a valuable citizen, and, above all, that very rare specimen—a perfectly honest man.

The Retort Unexpected.

While taking a stroll a few days ago in the neighbourhood of Sandymount I heard a dull crash behind me. On looking around I saw that two cars had collided at a spot where a small side road entered the main thoroughfare. The two drivers descended, leaving their cars still locked in grips in the centre of the road, and started the debate which usually takes place on these occasions as to who was responsible for the incident. The crowd as ever appeared from nowhere to "listen in" and, perhaps, takes sides. What the result was I do not know, but I was reminded of the story of the man who had to run his car into a tree to avoid having a bad crush with a lady driver. The latter had performed some totally unexpected manœuvre without giving any warning. When the man had extricated himself from the wreckage he inquired somewhat indignantly why she had not given some sign to indicate what her intentions were. The reply was: "I'm so sorry, but there is no sign for what I wanted to do."

The Beauty Hint.

The other day a friend of mine was discussing with an acquaintance the best means of avoiding sunburn. Her younger son, aged four, a red-headed, freckled youngster, seemed rather interested when his mother referred to the old remedy of buttermilk applied to freckles. Next day he wandered into the kitchen, where baking was in progress, and my friend turned round to find him with both fists in a jug of sour milk, with curds already plastered all over his face and hair. To her astonished reproof he replied: "Well, why did you give me red hair? All the boys at school call me red-top, and Leslie has black hair and doesn't get freckles."

Then she remembered with dismay her careless conversation!

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR.

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—The invitation to the Governor-General for a social function at Trinity College raises matters on which, I think, your readers would like a little enlightenment. As I understand the position, the Governor-General represents the King, not the Irish Free State. The accepted custom in the Empire is to receive the King's representative with "God Save the King." Either Mr. MacNeill objects to "God Save the King" being played in his presence—which is insulting to His Majesty—or he suffers from an inferiority complex, and regards his position as being only equal to that of a provincial governor in India (who is not entitled to "God Save the King")—which is insulting to the Irish Free State.

Any explanation which absolves Mr. MacNeill from disrespect or from regarding the Free State as having only the status of a province would, I think, be acceptable to your readers.—Yours, etc.,

R. E. BARROW.

Milestown, Castlebellingham, Ireland, June 8th, 1929.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—On behalf of myself and other Trinity graduates, may I thank those on the Committee of the College Races who declined to use the Republican "Soldiers' Song" in place of the National Anthem? We are more than surprised that Mr. MacNeill, the King's representative, should have desired the change to be made.

We Trinity men wish to assure the Free State of our good-will, but we think it a pity that the State should adopt as a National Anthem a song which in the memory of many is closely connected with dreadful outrages committed only a few years ago in the very precincts of our own university.—Yours, etc.,

IRISH COINAGE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—I notice that Mr. Blythe has stated in the Dail that the amount of British coinage redeemed from the Free State by the British Government is now £77,000. This represents a very sorry position. It is even worse than the incredible original agreement; for Mr. Churchill stated in the House of Commons, on February 27th, that £50,000 would be redeemed by March 31st, 1929, a further £100,000 in April, 1929, and £60,000 every ensuing April until April, 1939, making a total of £750,000 in all. This means that at least £150,000 instead of £77,000 should be redeemed by now. Mr. Blythe by a statement (which, in the beginning of March, he was reported to have made) that he would take credit for the profits of the whole issue in this year's Budget, effectively stifled all comment on the astounding announcement that England was going to repudiate her liability for that part of her coinage held by Free State citizens. It explains my silence and probably that of other commentators; but, now that Mr. Churchill seems to have won hands down over the Free State, and particularly since he has been ejected from office by his fellow-countrymen, it does not seem inopportune to make the comment which might have been made long ago.

The whole thing savours strongly of sharp practice; of this there is not a shadow of doubt. Mr. Churchill's sole defence in the House of Commons was that "this coinage was issued before the Exchequers were divided, and that the Irish and British taxpayers were both joint participators in the profits of the issue." This argument applies with exactly the same force to Treasury Notes, Savings Certificates and War Loan. A ten-shilling note has the same King's head on it that four half-crowns have. They were issued by the same authority and involve the same liability. There is this difference—which is "sharp practice" and absolutely nothing else—that the War Loan Savings Certificates, Treasury Notes are specifically redeemable by law, whereas the authorities forgot to state specifically in the Coinage Acts that they would redeem the coins. However, we all know that the coins would not circulate but that everybody takes for granted that the coins are redeemable. By implication there is just as much repudiation in refusing to redeem a half-crown as there is in refusing to redeem a ten-shilling note or a Savings Certificate.

The British position is that they will redeem no copper coinage whatever from the Free State, and only £750,000 of the silver coins (which Mr. Churchill considered to be at most only half of the silver coins in the Free State). Furthermore, when asked by Colonel Howard-Bury what would happen to the amount in excess of £750,000, Mr. Churchill said that "at any rate, it will not be repatriated here to the loss of the British Exchequer." In other words, if £100,000 of British silver, minted long after the Treaty, is sent for redemption from China or Canada or any country in the world, it will be redeemed so long as it does not come from the Free State. It is obvious, I suppose, that, with the amount of silver that is being continuously brought here by tourists, etc., we will never be in a position to issue our own coinage. This is the opposite of what was done to Australia and South Africa when they made their coinage issues. There was no repudiation in their cases.

Well now, what about it? First, there is a new British Government in power, which may have more regard for British credit abroad. During the coinage debate in the House of Commons the Labour Party—in the persons of Mr. Clynes and Lieutenant-Commander Kenworthy—spoke sympathetically from our point of view. Why should there not be a renewal of the negotiations? If the British Government think they can repudiate their liability on their coinage, we are very foolish if we let them bleat with impunity in the international markets that they pay their debts. Remember that Mr. Churchill's argument about "joint participation in the profits" is just as irrevelant as in the case of War Loan. All that was ultimately settled by the ultimate financial settlement. Further, every Free State citizen who is going to Great Britain or Northern Ireland may do his little bit by carrying out as much British coinage (preferably pre-Treaty coinage) as he can conveniently carry. Various organisations, particularly the banks, might do yeoman work in this direction. It should be remembered that this is not a question of politics or religion, but a question of considerably more than £1,000,000 which Mr. Blythe will take out of our pockets if we do not make the real debtors pay up to him.—Yours, etc.,

COMPULSORY IRISH.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE IRISH TIMES.

SIR,—During the past winter and spring my attention was drawn to the condition of many poor children who attend our Free State national schools—bootless, wretchedly clothed, and with nothing to eat in their school-bags. The man who brought the matter prominently before me in the first instance is an intelligent farmer. "Yet," he said, "they make the country pay, and pay heavily, for such foolishness as compulsory Irish." I have seen in your paper an explanation by Mr. Blythe's Parliamentary Secretary of the estimate of the Stationery Office expenditure, which includes £900 to keep alive Gaelic periodicals.

The good money so hardly wrung out of a poor country, and so grossly misspent on bolstering up a dead and useless language would surely be better applied in providing food, clothing and shoe-leather for the very poor, half-starving little ones who attend the Free State national schools, and in many cases have long distances to travel. To sit down to learn Irish, or anything else, on an empty stomach would hardly appeal to the "patriots" who are responsible for the scandal, and who themselves live comfortably on their fat Government stipends.—Yours, etc.,

"DISGUSTED."

MUSIC AT BRAY.

The Army No. 1 Band, conducted by Lieutenant J. Doyle, will render the following programme on Bray Esplanade on Wednesday, 12th June, from 7.45 to 9.45 p.m.:—

March, "The Step of the Guard" (Oscheit); Overture, "Tannhauser" (Wagner); Norwegian Rhapsody (Lalo); selection, "Cavalleria Rusticana" (Mascagni); Overture, "William Tell" (Rossini); Ballet Music from "Faust" (Gounod); Suite, "Sylvia" (Delibes); Valse, "Ever or Never" (Waldteufel).

I saw in Belgium and France recently large posters worded entirely in English, which is a sheer waste of money so far as 99 per cent. of those who see them are concerned.—Mr. F. W. Goodenough.

AUCTIONEERS AND ESTATE AGENTS.

PROPOSED PROTECTIVE REGISTER.

ASSOCIATION TO SEEK LEGISLATION.

A meeting of the Association of Auctioneers and Estate Agents was held in Jury's Hotel, Dublin, yesterday afternoon—Mr. Lionel V. Bennett in the chair—to consider the provisions of the bill which it is proposed to introduce in the Oireachtas for the protection of auctioneers. There was a good attendance.

The Chairman explained that the meeting was called for the purpose of considering the report of the committee which was appointed last autumn in connection with a proposal to promote legislation for the protection of their profession. On November 14th a council meeting passed a resolution that a subcommittee be formed to inquire into, and report on, the advisability of the Association promoting a bill for the protection of the profession.

The idea underlying that resolution was that steps should be taken, by raising the status and enhancing the dignity of the business carried on by auctioneers and estate agents, to increase their usefulness to the public. It was felt that they owed a duty not only to themselves, but to the public—on the one hand, to save the public from the activities of unqualified, irregular and unreliable persons carrying on their business, and, on the other hand, to ensure that a business which involved valuable property and great skill should be carried on by properly qualified practitioners, whose qualifications would be a security to the public.

The committee submitted a report to a council meeting, and on March 5, 1929, the matter of the proposed legislation was discussed at the annual general meeting. The committee decide :—

(1) That before proceeding with the bill steps should be taken instructing a solicitor to instruct a counsel to draft the necessary bill.

(2) That the members should make such inquiries as they could with a view to ascertaining (a) what interests would be likely to support the bill; (b) what interests would be likely to oppose it. (c) That steps should be taken to ascertain what political support or opposition would be likely to be forthcoming.

(3) To proceed with the actual promotion of the bill through its various stages in the Dail and Senate.

(4) That in the meantime the existing subcommittee should be kept in being to act as a link between the Association and its advisers.

PROPOSED REGISTER.

It was suggested that the best way of dealing with the problem would be on the following lines :—(1) That a register of persons carrying out the duties of auctioneers and estate agents should be formed. (2) That the register should be under the control of a registration board, who would make rules governing procedure, qualification, fees payable for admission to the register, and other matters. (3) That the composition of the board, whether by means of representation from certain Associations and of the Government, or otherwise, would have to be dealt with. (4) That the classes of persons to be admitted to the register and the classes of persons to be refused admission would have to be dealt with. (5) That it would also be necessary to incorporate provisions for penalising unregistered practitioners, and for providing that such should not be entitled to sue for their fees.

It had been proposed that every new auctioneer should pay to the Government a stamp duty of not less than £50, and that every practising auctioneer should pay an annual licence fee of not less than £10. It was also the opinion of the committee that house agents and sellers of houses should be compelled to take out a licence, and that the existing fee of £2 for a house agent or appraiser was too low.

Mr. P. G. Kavanagh, Hon. Secretary of the Incorporated Society of Auctioneers and Landed Property Agents; Mr. Percy E. MacArthur, of the National Auctioneers' Association; Mr. T. Morgan Good, Mr. J. S. McMahon, Mr. Probert, Mr. Albert MacArthur, and others expressed the view that legislation was necessary.

Mr. P. Leonard, T.D. (Government, Dublin, N.), said that if a bill was presented to the Dail he would support it. Such a bill, however, could not be passed this session.

On the motion of the Chairman, seconded by Mr. Good, the following resolution was passed :—"(1) That the Irish Auctioneers' and Estate Agents' Association is worthy of the support of all auctioneers, estate agents and valuers in Ireland; and (2) that the Association supports its sub-committee in the steps they have already taken with a view to promoting legislation for the protection of our profession, and that they authorise the subcommittee to instruct a solicitor and counsel to proceed with the matter."

It was decided that the secretary circularise all the auctioneers and estate agents in Ireland with a view to their joining the Association.

THE DEVOY FUNERAL.

LYING-IN-STATE AT THE DUBLIN CITY HALL.

The remains of Mr. John Devoy will arrive at Queenstown from New York to-morrow, and it is expected that on the followng day they will be brought to Dublin for the lying-in-state and public funeral to Glasnevin, which will take place next Sunday.

On their arrival at Dublin the remains will be escorted to the Pro-Cathedral, Marlborough street, where they will lie overnight. At 11 o'clock on Friday morning Solemn Requiem Mass will be celebrated, after which the body will be removed to the City Hall, where it will lie in state till Sunday, when the public funeral will take place.

The Free State Government will participate officially in the funeral. While the Fianna Fail Party will not take part as an organisation, many of its members will attend the Requiem Mass and the funeral.

DRINK THROUGH HOLE IN THE WALL.

SUNDAY PROCESSION OF CONSUMERS IN PORTADOWN.

At the Licensing Court in Portadown yesterday, Joseph McNiece, publican, was charged by District Inspector Anderson with selling intoxicating liquor at his premises in Woodhouse street, Portadown, on Sunday, June 2.

Six men were charged with aiding and abetting McNiece, and the police evidence was that drink was handed out to these men through a hole in the yard wall.

Mr. P. M. Cullen (Messrs. McGarvey and Cullen) admitted the offence on behalf of the accused man, and appealed for leniency. He said that his client was not on the premises at the time, and added that the hole in the wall had now been built up to the satisfaction of the police.

District Inspector Anderson said that there were previous convictions against the defendant.

Mr. McElroy, R.M., said that they believed that the hole in the wall was there for the purpose of Sunday trading, and that there was a procession of consumers there every Sunday. Defendant had a six-day licence, and on this date he was selling drink without a licence. He would be fined £2, and his licence would be endorsed.

The six men charged with aiding and abetting were each fined 20s. and costs.

SHANNON SCHEME EXCURSION.

On last Saturday a large party, organised by the Dublin City Branch of the I.N.T.O. and the Teachers' Club, paid a visit to the Shannon Electricity Works. A special train conveyed the party to Limerick, where a fleet of I.O.C. omnibuses was waiting to take the excursionists on a tour of the whole area covered by the scheme.

Mr. Creagh, Chief of the Guide Bureau, and a number of official guides, accompanied the party from Limerick, and explained the details of the stupendous undertaking.

The arrangements made by the G.S. Railway Company for the comfort of the excursionists was much appreciated, as was also the help afforded by a representative of the Irish Omnibus Company, who travelled with the party from Dublin.

Mr. I. J. Freyne, Organising Secretary of the Dublin City Branch, was in charge of the arrangements.

IN THE NORTHERN CAPITAL.

FROM A SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Monday.

THE members of the General Assembly left Dublin for home last Saturday, and the Northern contingent were delighted with the cordial welcome they received during their short stay in the Free State. The official visit by the Governor-General, as representing the Government of Saorstat Eireann, was greatly appreciated, as was also his presence at the garden party given in honour of the delegates; and the visit of the Archbishop of Dublin was valued as symbolising the happy relations existing between the Presbyterian Church and the Church of Ireland. New friendships were formed, and old bonds were strengthened, while everything was done by the hospitable Dublin people to entertain the strangers within their gates. These kindnesses were gracefully acknowledged by the Moderator in his closing address, and his tribute to the justice and toleration of the Free State authorities should be a rebuke to those blind politicians whose conception of loyalty seems to be the abuse of anyone who differs from them. The seeds of a good-will which were sown in Dublin during the Assembly week will grow and blossom in good time.

NORTHERN HOUSING PROBLEM.

The housing problem in the North is still causing a good deal of concern to the authorities, and the question of providing more ample accommodation for the working classes is to be considered. At the last meeting of the Corporation of Belfast it was suggested that something should be done with regard to the old worn-out houses in the city, and that dwellings at cheap rents should be built for the poorer people who had not yet been touched by the scheme. The idea is to abolish slumland, but even the cheapest houses erected by the Corporation would be too dear for the city's "submerged tenth." That is the difficulty. Councillor Kilpatrick said that the overcrowding, as revealed in the medical officer's report, was deplorable, and contended that the houses being built were never intended for the working classes, whose interests, he said, had been neglected.

It does not seem possible to build decent houses at an economic rent which would be within the reach of men with small wages; and, on the other hand, Alderman Midgley, champion of the workers, objects to what he describes as a proposal "to build snuff-boxes in conformity with the size of the men's wages." There the matter rests. Enniskillen has also its shortage of houses, to meet which a number of small huts has been erected throughout the district, many of which are declared to be unsuitable even for cattle to live in. The Ministry of Home Affairs has drawn attention to this scandal, and it is suggested that the Government should be approached to increase the subsidy, but it is questionable if the authorities will depart from the established rule.

AN INTERESTING MARKET.

The proposal to demolish Smithfield Market and to convert it into a parking place for private motor cars and the provision of garage facilities for buses and motor vehicles generally, is certain to arouse widespread opposition. This famous spot is the happy hunting ground for collectors, who wander through its lanes, bordered with stalls, in search of ancient books, antiques, curiosities, cheap furniture, clothes; and among the thousands of odds and ends which lumber the place, valuable objects may occasionally be picked up at a nominal cost. It is one of the "institutions" of the city's activities, dear to the bargain-monger, and there is a fascination in examining its wealth of goods of all kinds.

The scheme was suggested by the Recorder of Belfast in a considered article some time ago as part of a much larger project to solve the city's traffic problem, in which the widening of roads and bridges, and the construction of new thoroughfares are advocated. It is a far-reaching plan which would involve large sums of money, and it is probable that in the march of events, and in the further development of the city, something like it will have to be done. At present it is being considered by the Corporation Committees concerned, and the market and adjacent premises have been inspected, but no decision has yet been made. The whole subject should be considered with a view to some commendable form of "town-planning," and for that very careful consideration would be required..

INDUSTRIAL PROBLEMS.

The Belfast Chamber of Trade, at a meeting held the other day, strongly urged the importance of supporting local industries. Some time ago the Prime Minister gave to the people a new slogan, "Buy Ulster Goods," and although there is nothing very original about it, the attention of the community is directed in this little phrase to a very important subject. Now that a Labour Government has come into power in Great Britain, it behoves the business concerns in Northern Ireland to be alert to every opportunity that presents itself for expansion of trade and industry; for it is well known and admitted that the Socialist leaders do not look with a favourable eye upon the Craigavon Administration. Before the general election destroyed their hopes, it was thought by the Unionist leaders that with the return of Mr. Baldwin the safeguarding of the linen industry might be accomplished, but that bright prospect has vanished.

Probably the Socialists will do nothing to injure the existing financial arrangements between the Imperial and the Northern Governments, but on the other hand, it is not likely that they will go out of their way to help their declared opponents out of their difficulties. According to the latest returns from the Labour Exchanges, there was an improvement in the unemployment figures due to increased activity in the linen industry—a happy break in the cloud of depression—and everything possible should be done to maintain increased sales. In this way the Premier's slogan may do good, although purchasers are only too frequently attracted by the cheaper prices of inferior foreign fabrics. The big drapery and outfitting establishments could also help on the movement by specialising in goods manufactured at home all the time, and not just spasmodically at stated periods.

A ROMANTIC PERSONAGE.

The visit of Sir Robert and Lady Baden-Powell to Belfast led to a remarkable display of enthusiasm by the Boy Scouts and Girl Guides at a grand rally of these organisations at Balmoral Show grounds last Saturday. An atmosphere of romance surrounds Sir Robert, and in the world of boyhood he is probably the most heroic figure on the horizon. The movement of which he is the chief is based on lofty ideals of honour, discipline and service, and its picturesque dress, symbols, camp life and the study of woodcraft and other mysteries of its code, appeal to the youthful mind and imagination. Lady Baden-Powell is also a notable personage with the Girl Guides, and her welcome even exceeded in cordiality the ovation given to the chief.

Over eleven thousand boys and girls took part in the parade, and both the distinguished visitors were delighted, Sir Robert stating in the course of a brief speech that "he was mighty glad to see such a fine show." The Duchess of Abercorn, who is Chief Commissioner of the Girl Guides, paid a tribute to the work of the organisations, and appropriate gifts of Ulster table linen were made to Sir Robert and Lady Baden-Powell, her Grace expressing the hope that they would long be spared to dine with each other. An interesting programme was then gone through, and the "jamboree" will long linger pleasantly in the memories of those who took part in it.

TRAFFIC IN POTEEN.

The traffic in poteen is still besmirching the reputation of the border counties, and it appears to flourish notwithstanding the heavy penalties of fines and imprisonment which are periodically imposed on offenders. Hardly a week passes without some cases being brought before the courts, and the police and magistrates are doing all they can to stamp out the evil, but it yet exists to a large extent in remote districts where big profits tempt the venturesome to run the risk of discovery and punishment. It is gratifying to know that the Northern police and Southern guards are co-operating in efforts to capture the lawbreakers, and in that way some good results are being effected both in the suppression of illicit spirits and in the cultivation of good fellowship between the two forces taking part in the operations.

During the week-end extensive raids took place in the Claudy district of County Londonderry, and several men were mulcted in substantial fines, it being stated by the District Inspector that one of them was running a public-house on poteen. Much has been done, but it is problematical if the trade will ever be totally suppressed.

FIFTY-SEVEN GALLONS OF POTEEN.

POLICE SEIZURE IN LURGAN.

District Inspector Duffy, Head Constable Beatty, Sergeants Blair and Maloney, and a party of constables raided premises in Watson's lane, Lurgan, yesterday morning, and seized a quantity of poteen, wash, and poteen-making plant. Samples of the spirit having been taken, the remainder was spilled into the main sewer.

There was a sequel to the seizure at a Licensing Court in Portadown later in the day, before Messrs. George M'Elroy, R.M., and W. G. Moriarty, R.M., when a respectable-looking man, Edward Martin, appeared in custody charged with being engaged in illicit distillation.

Mr. A. Campbell, solicitor, appeared for the defence.

District Inspector Duffy stated in evidence that at 5.30 that morning he proceeded with other police to the accused man's premises, where he found :—

57 gallons of illicit spirit,
200 gallons of wash,
An illicit still,
Two worms, and other articles connected with illicit distillation.

One still actually was working at the time, and the accused man was present alone. Accused man accepted full responsibility. Witness then arrested him.

The Court remanded the defendant till next Lurgan Petty Sessions, bail being fixed at £200.

DERRY SHOPKEEPER ACQUITTED

Margaret Rabbit, the wife of a former constable in the R.I.C., appeared in the dock at Derry City Crown Sessions yesterday, charged with receiving a pair of shoes, the property of Mr. A. W. Kennedy, Duke street, knowing them to have been stolen. Accused pleaded not guilty.

The principal witness for the prosecution was a youth named John M'Dermott, who was sentenced to six months' imprisonment last week for the larceny of the shoes, which, he said, he sold to Mrs. Rabbit for 2s. and a packet of cigarettes.

The shoes were found by Detective Constable Murphy in a parcel in Mrs. Rabbit's shop, and her evidence was that they had been left there by M'Dermott, who had called for cigarettes and never returned.

The jury, without leaving the box, recorded a verdict of not guilty.

"I thoroughly concur with the verdict," said Judge Osborne to the accused, "and you leave the court without the slightest slur on your character as the result of this case."

QUEEN'S UNIVERSITY.

The Rev. E. G. Seale, M.A., Headmaster of Portora School, Enniskillen, has been appointed as the representative of Fermanagh County Council upon the Senate of Queen's University, Belfast.

John McKee, Coalisland, was, at Dungannon Petty Sessions yesterday, fined 2s. 6d. and 20s. costs in each of two cases of falsely representing to the Northern Ministry of Labour that he was unemployed on April 12 and 17.

SHOTS AT FORMER R.I.C. MAN.

ALIBI DEFENCE IN COUNTY GALWAY CHARGE.

At Loughrea, District Justice Cahill further remanded, on bail, John Deeley, Birrogue, and Stephen Hawkins, Ballinagrieve, farmers, who are charged with shooting at, with intent to murder, Matthew Healy, Loughrea, a former member of the R.I.C., and owner of a small grocer's shop at Sonnegh, on the night of April 23 last. Mr. Healy was standing outside his shop when he received several pellets in the right arm and thigh.

The evidence for the defence, which has not yet concluded, was to the effect that the accused Hawkins was in his home, about a mile from Healy's shop, at the time of the outrage, and that Deeley was at the same time visiting the house of a neighbour, Owen Lynch, over two miles from Healy's shop.

VETERINARY OFFICERS' DUTIES.

STATEMENT BY ASSOCIATION.

We are asked by the Veterinary Officers' Association to publish the following statement :—"In reply to a communication appearing in a recent issue of the Irish Times re the extra remuneration received by members of the clerical veterinary sections of the Free State Department of Agriculture while engaged on foot-and-mouth disease duties in County Wexford last year, we wish to make it perfectly clear that we are not opposed to any section of any department being paid overtime or extra remuneration in cases such as this. We, however, submit that such candid admission on the part of the clerical officers concerned more than makes our case plain, inasmuch as they point out that a bonus or overtime, as the case may be, was unquestionably their due. But what we wish to emphasise is that the veterinary inspectors concerned who were called upon to work 12-14 hours per day, exposed to the worst possible weather conditions, in order to control and stamp out this outbreak of disease, should be completely ignored, and did not receive any financial consideration when, at the same time, the clerical staff were remunerated for the extra duties they were called upon to do.

"Such a grave discrepancy certainly necessitates rectification in order to prevent a recurrence of what is undoubtedly a great injustice to the veterinary officers concerned."

COUNTY SLIGO PERJURY CHARGE.

In the Grange District Court yesterday, William Finnegan, farmer, of Cliffoney, Co. Sligo, was returned for trial on bail to the Circuit Court, charged with committing perjury during the hearing of a poteen prosecution against him by stating that a local farmer had planted the poteen on his premises, and that Detective Drugan took the bottle of poteen from a hole in the thatch.

All the tinplate mills belonging to the Grovesend group of workers near Swansea are fully employed at present.

WORK ON THE FARM.

CONDITIONS IN THE FREE STATE.

CROPS IN FORWARD CONDITION.

The Free State Department of Agriculture's report on agricultural conditions in the Free State on June 1 states that the month of May opened generally with showery weather, accompanied by rather harsh winds and ground frosts at night. These influences had an adverse effect on the growing crops, checking the progress of the young brairds of cereals and of early-sown mangels. Towards the middle of the month, however, a milder temperature and soft rains restored the growth of all crops; and during the last week warm sunshine following upon these rains promoted rapid growth. At the end of the month pastures, cereal and root crops had derived much benefit from the change, and were in a well-advanced condition for the time of year. During the month the sowing of the mangel and sugar beet crops was completed, and in many districts large areas of turnips were sown.

The other work upon which farmers were engaged included the after-cultivation of the earlier sown root crops, the moulding of potato crops, the rolling of cereal and grass lands, the preparation of land for turnip crops, the cutting and saving of turf, and the washing and shearing of sheep. The season so far as it has gone has proved so favourable for field work of all kinds that in many districts all the ordinary seasonal work is well ahead of time, and such non-seasonal duties as the making and repairing of drains and the renovation of houses have been taken in hands.

PASTURES AND LIVE STOCK.

The cold and dry weather which prevailed generally up to the beginning of May was unfavourable to the growth of pastures, which consequently became barer than usual for that time of year, affording comparatively little keep for live stock. Meadows also were in the main rather thin and backward. Farmers, however, who adopted the precautions recommended by the Department early in the year, of applying suitable dressings of artificial manures, so as to promote early growth, were compensated during the month by obtaining a welcome supply of early grass, which enabled them to give their other fields a rest. The genial weather experienced later in the month had a very beneficial effect on pastures, with the result that all such lands are now carrying an abundant covering of grass of excellent feeding quality.

CATTLE HEALTHY.

Cattle generally are reported to be healthy. Store cattle, although on the thin side owing to the poor quality of the keep afforded by the pastures during the greater part of the month are, nevertheless, healthy and thriving. Dairy cattle have been lying out since the beginning of the month. They are reported generally to be doing exceptionally well, and to have responded to the improved condition of the pastures in the latter half of the month by yielding larger supplies of milk than were obtainable at the corresponding period of last year. Abortion among dairy cattle is unfortunately still reported from many districts.

CATCH CROPS.

The great advantage of making alternative provision for early spring feeding by the timely sowing of catch crops was again exemplified this season. During the greater part of April and the whole of May, when the winter reserves of fodder were becoming exhausted, the pastures were yet unready for grazing, and the prices of imported feeding stuffs were maintaining a high level, farmers who had sown catch crops found their position considerably eased by having a supply of cuttings from winter oats and vetches, rye and vetches, and forward Italian rye grass. Many farmers had also adopted the additional measures recommended by the Department of applying suitable top-dressings in February and early in March, and thus secured an early supply of grass on selected fields.

CEREAL AND ROOT CROPS.

Grain crops are all in a forward condition. Speaking generally, both winter and spring sown wheats made rapid growth during the latter half of the month, and present indications give promise of satisfactory crops. Oats and barley also brairded well, and, like the wheat, made exceptional progress during the second half of May. It is reported from some districts of County Cork and Waterford that some fields of oats are thin owing to one or other of the following causes, namely, attacks of wire worm, use of seed of poor germinating quality, or lack of proper attention to the manuring of the land. Even in those districts, however, the crop as a whole is stated to be promising. Attacks of wire worm are also reported from many other districts, but so far as can be gauged the damage done was not extensive. Charlock (or Preshaugh) is reported to be more than usually prevalent, and farmers are adopting the usual precaution of spraying the crops.

Reports generally indicate that the root crops look healthy and are making good progress.

FLAX.

It is reported from the principal flax growing counties that sowings were made generally under excellent conditions and that the early brairds are looking well. In County Donegal some early sown crops suffered a slight set-back as a result of frosts. In that county the area devoted to flax is estimated to be substantially the same as that sown last year; but in all the other flax growing counties smaller areas have been sown. No reports of any serious damage by disease have reached the Department of Agriculture.

POTATOES.

The demand for potatoes for home consumption continued steady during the month at prices raging from 4s. to 8s. per cwt., according to quality and district. In most places outside, as well as in the principal exporting counties, considerable quantities of the potato crop were used on the farms for pig-feeding, and stocks are now getting low. It is reported from County Mayo that about 60 tons were sent from there to Cork, for which the producers received £5 15s. a ton. In County Tipperary six-ton lots made £30 a ton, but in King's County similar lots that had been realising £24 at the beginning of May were being sold for £20 at the close of the month, farmers in many cases joining together to provide consignments in wagon lots for Dublin. Export inquiry in the more northern counties of the Free State virtually ceased during the month, and trade was more or less limited to the sale of small lots for the Dublin and Belfast markets.

DAMAGE BY FROSTS.

The planting of the new season's crop was completed generally under the most favourable conditions. Despite the damage inflicted by the frosts earlier in the season, both early and main crop potatoes are looking exceedingly well, having developed rapidly in the latter part of May. It is expected that early and second early varieties will be ready for digging about at least a week before the normal time. In some districts in County Cork small supplies of new home-grown potatoes were on sale during the last ten days of the month. They were of fairly good size, and the quality was considered good for the season.

Lifting of small quantities of first earlies began in Dungarvan on May 25, and a consignment was exported to Glasgow on the 31st, the price to the growers being £14 per ton. It is reported that only once before in the past twenty years was the crop fit to be lifted in May. Digging has also taken place in Youghal district and in parts of Co. Mayo.

BLIGHT.

The main crop is promising well, the stalks being vigorous and healthy. Most of the growers are making preparations for early spraying, which is, of course, essential if the best results are to be obtained. The presence of blight was observed in Co. Waterford on the 30th May, and has since been found in several fields in that county. In view of this unusually early appearance of the disease notices urging the importance of spraying crops immediately have been circulated widely by the Department of Agriculture.

CATTLE FAIRS.

The fairs held during the month were of average dimensions, and the supplies of all classes of cattle on offer were up to the normal. Young bullocks and heifers showing condition and quality maintained last month's level of prices, although shipping inquiry slowed down as the month advanced. The demand for calves continued active. Thin, old and inferior cattle were difficult to clear. Fat cattle sold well, principally for home consumption, at prices around last month's quotations.

AVERAGE PRICES.

The following figures represent the range of average prices for the various descriptions of stock sold during the month :—

	Price per Head.		Maximum estimated Live Weight Price per Cwt.
Calves under 6 months	£ 2 10 0	to £ 4 15 0	—
First Class Yearlings (6 to 12 months)	8 10 0	to 11 5 0	—
First Class Stores (1 to 2 yrs.)	12 10 0	to 16 10 0	40/- to 48/-
First Class Stores (2 to 3 yrs.)	16 10 0	to 18 10 0	40/- to 49/-
First Class Stores (3 years and over)	18 0 0	to 22 0 0	42/- to 49/-
Fat Bullocks and Heifers (3 years and over)	22 0 0	to 26 10 0	41/- to 50/-
Best Fat Cows (3 years and over)	15 0 0	to 21 0 0	32/- to 40/-
Choice Springing Cows and Heifers (3 years and over)	20 0 0	to 25 0 0	—
Down calved Cows (3 years and over)	19 0 0	to 23 10 0	—

SHEEP.

Flocks continued in a healthy condition. In the few cases of liver fluke disease reported it is stated that the preventive and curative measures adopted proved effectual, and no serious mortality is recorded. Trade during the month was variable. In the early weeks the cross-Channel inquiry for lambs declined considerably, and supplies in some cases were in excess of the demand. In the closing weeks, however, trade showed a marked improvement, and prices firmed up. The demand for other classes of sheep was moderate throughout, save in the case of hoggets, the inquiry for which fell away as the demand for lambs increased. Prices for fat sheep varied from 65s. to 95s. each; for hoggets 57s. to 65s., and for lambs 40s. to 60s. each.

Shearing was in full progress at all centres during the latter half of the month. The quantity and quality of the clip were about the average. The market for wool had not fully opened at the end of the month, but quotations in County Tipperary were :—Lowland wool 1s. 2d. per lb., Down wool 1s. 6d. per lb., and mountain wool 11d. per lb. In County Galway washed wool opened at 1s 6d per lb. In certain of the Southern counties the prices recorded are :—Washed long wools 1s. 3d. per lb., unwashed 1s. per lb., mountain wool 10d. per lb.

PIGS.

The number of pigs on offer at the fairs held during the month was slightly below the number marketed during the month of May, 1928. Prices eased slightly in sympathy with the fall in bacon prices in the London market, but were, nevertheless, considerably higher (almost 20s. per cwt. dead-weight) than those prevailing at the corresponding period of last year. Prices during the month ranged around 97s. to 100s. per cwt. dead weight (or approximately 73s. to 74s. 9d. on the live weight basis) in the Southern markets, and around 100s. to 107s. 6d. per cwt. dead weight in the Northern markets of the Free State. Bonhams were in reasonable supply, and met a fair demand at prices ranging from 27s. to 35s. and in some cases up to 40s. each.

The number of breeding sows appears to have fallen off to some extent during the winter, owing probably to the necessity for conserving supplies of home-grown fodder, and the high prices which prevailed for imported feeding stuffs. It is generally reported that the number of sows sent to the boar during the month of May showed a marked increase; but the effect on the supply of pigs for the market will not be apparent for some time to come.

HORSES.

The number of horses on offer at the fairs held during the month was under the average. Demand was moderate. Prices for good farm horses ranged from £16 to £25; for troopers £35 to £45; for four-year-old unmade hunters, £70 to £100, and for made hunters £80 to £250.

MILK.

The milk yield showed an exceptional increase towards the end of the month in almost every county in the Irish Free State, due to the genial weather and the improved condition of the grazing, and supplies to creameries improved in proportion. Prices varied from 6d. to 7d. per gallon. Milk collected in County Meath for retail sale in Dublin returned 9d. per gallon to the producers.

ENNISKILLEN BOOKMAKER FINED.

When Lawrence M'Keown, a registered bookmaker in the Free State, but who resides in Enniskillen, was prosecuted before the Enniskillen magistrates yesterday for carrying on betting at his residence, Mr. Winslow, solicitor for the accused man, pleaded guilty. He said that in Northern Ireland everyone put something on a horse in a big race, but it was done surreptitiously. Even the police themselves all backed horses.

District Inspector Murray—And the solicitors.

Chairman (Mr. Trimble, J.P.)—Some say that betting is worse than drunkenness.

Defendant was fined £5 and costs, and two men found on the premises at the time of the police raid were each fined 10s. and costs.

DISMISSED SURVEYOR'S CASE

BELFAST COUNCIL PREFERS NOT TO DECIDE.

A special meeting of the Belfast City Council was held yesterday to consider the sixth interim report of the Special Committee appointed by the Council in April, 1926, to examine the report of the Housing Commission. The report dealt with the dismissal of Mr. H. A. Cutler from the position of City Surveyor of Belfast, and matters arising subsequently on the question of a pension for Mr. Cutler. It appeared that Mr. Cutler's case had gone to the Civil Service Committee for Northern Ireland in London. The Civil Service Committee advised a settlement by agreement, and deferred a decision in order to give the parties time to consider the suggestion.

The Corporation's Committee met last week, and reported as follows :—"While they greatly regret that the regulations and restrictions of the Institution of Civil Engineers have, in the circumstances of his dismissal, had the effect of preventing Mr. Cutler practising his profession under its auspices, they cannot see their way to go further than to remind the Council that Mr. Cutler entered the service of the Corporation in September, 1903, and remained in it till 1926; that until the year 1925 no question had arisen which could be said to suggest that Mr. Cutler had served the Corporation in his capacity as City Surveyor otherwise than faithfully and well. In view of the terms of the letter of the Civil Service Committee set out above the Council is recommended to instruct Mr. Elliot to inform the Civil Service Committee that the Council desires that the question at issue be decided by the Civil Service Committee itself."

Alderman Sir William Turner, moving the adoption of the report, said that an impression was held by some that that Mr. Cutler had been granted a pension. This was not the case, and there was no foundation for such a view. The report submitted showed that the Civil Service Committee had sat on two occasions to deal with Mr. Cutler's claim, and they suggested that it might be settled by agreement. The Special Committee, having carefully considered the matter from all points of view, were of the opinion that the Civil Service Committee should themselves decide the matter. That was the committee's recommendation in a nut shell, and seemed the fairest and most equitable way of dealing with the question.

The Lord Mayor seconded the motion.

The report was unanimously adopted.

Alderman Duff wrote to the Town Clerk apologising for his absence, as he would not be in town. His letter went on to state :—"My inability to be present is deeply regretted by me, inasmuch as I desired to state publicly the fact that none of my colleagues or myself were informed, when we passed judgment on Mr. Cutler, by direction of our legal counsel, that the rules and regulations governing the Institute of Civil Engineers would, as now appears, practically excommunicate Mr. Cutler from his profession, and thereby debar him from earning his livelihood therein."

ROYAL IRISH CONSTABULARY.

EX-MEMBERS MEET IN CORK.

A large and representative meeting of ex-members of the Royal Irish Constabulary was held at the Hall, Marlboro' street, Cork, on Sunday.

Mr. M. Owens, who presided, outlined the steps which were being taken to secure equalisation of pensions, the removal of restrictions, and the winding up of the Constabulary Force Fund, and stated that a memorial was being prepared which would be signed by representatives of the four provinces and would be forwarded to the British Government. Mr. Owens expressed the hope that the new Labour Government would introduce a short, non-contentious Act of Parliament in the House of Commons which would enable the fund, which now amounted to £278,000, to be distributed amongst the ex-members of the force.

DERRY CORPORATION.

The General Purposes Committee of the Derry Corporation yesterday received a letter from the General Secretary of the Catholic Emancipation Centenary Committee requesting the Corporation to appoint a representative to attend the Dublin celebration.

Alderman Bradley proposed that Councillor Healy be appointed. Councillor McMenamin seconded.

Councillor A. Anderson—Who will pay his expenses?

The Assistant Town Clerk said that the Corporation had no power to pay the expenses in this case.

Alderman Bradley said that if the Corporation did not want to send representatives let it be straightforward and say so.

Councillor Sir Basil McFarland said that if all the Catholic members wished to go and represent the Corporation his side of the House would say certainly; let them go. The question was: Would the Corporation pay the expenses? He moved as an amendment that those members of the other side of the house who were desirous of attending the celebrations should be authorised to represent the Corporation and bear their own expenses.

Councillor Corbett seconded.

Alderman Bradley withdrew his motion, and Councillor McFarland's proposal was agreed to.

Feis Cill Airne was held in fine weather last Sunday in the mansion grounds of the Kenmare demesne, kindly lent to the local Gaelic League by the Earl and Countess of Kenmare. The entries showed a substantial increase.

Britain and Europe.

The signing in Paris of the experts' report on reparations closes the most troublesome chapter of European history since the war. Its clauses follow closely the various forecasts that have been published from time to time, and the document puts, as one German newspaper remarks, a bottom to the hitherto bottomless vat into which between forty and fifty milliards of German marks have been poured during the last ten years. Henceforward Germany will pay an average annuity of £102,500,000 to the Allies. This amount will be divided into two parts, one of which, to the extent of £33,000,000, plus a sum sufficient to pay principal and interest on the Dawes loan, must be paid punctually in equal monthly instalments. The other, and major, portion of the annuities will be paid half-yearly; but, if Germany's industry should fall upon lean days, a moratorium to a maximum of two years may be granted by the Bank of International Settlements, through which all payments will be made. This concession, of course, will be granted to Germany only after the strictest investigation of her economic circumstances. All forms of external control over those pledges which were claimed by the Allies as security for the Dawes payments will disappear. The new payments will be secured not on specific mortgages, but on Germany's entire credit, so that there can be no question of default. Finally, the new system will enable the Allies to "commercialise" Germany's annuities, thus capitalising, if they so choose, their several shares.

For the successful result of the negotiations much credit is due to Sir Austen Chamberlain, Foreign Secretary in Mr. Baldwin's Government. During the last five years he has been working constantly to achieve a settlement, and his influence always was used in the cause of a better understanding between the former belligerents. The new British Government is very fortunate in its foreign inheritance. We presume that, with the reparations question out of the way, the British Army of Occupation will be withdrawn almost immediately from the Rhineland, and the path will be clear for a really constructive policy on the Continent of Europe. During the first Labour Government's brief tenure of office Mr. Ramsay Macdonald himself took charge of the Foreign Office. Even his most bitter critics at the time allowed that he made a conspicuous success of his task, which, of course, he had not time to finish; and, just as Sir Austen Chamberlain's work has smoothed the way for Mr. Macdonald's Government, the Labour Premier may be said to have been the man who made Locarno possible. Very wisely, Mr. Macdonald has decided on this occasion not to act as Foreign Secretary. He will have more than enough to do as Prime Minister, and he has appointed Mr. Arthur Henderson to take charge of foreign affairs. The new Foreign Secretary is not a brilliant statesman; but we have no doubt that Mr. Macdonald will exercise a general supervision over his work.

Britain's foreign policy is a policy of peace. His Majesty's Government is anxious, on the one hand, to promote the most intimate relations with the United States of America, and, on the other, to maintain a cordial friendship with both France and Germany. British interests demand complete impartiality of treatment on the Continent of Europe. Naturally, the sympathies of the British people lean towards the French, with whom they fought side by side for more than four years; but the welfare of Europe depends very largely on the disappearance of war-time alliances and the development of close relations between all its States. The problem of Russia is likely to give some trouble to the new British Government; but we have no fear that Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, to whom the Zinovieff letter five years ago came as a salutary shock, will attempt to upset the continuity of the national attitude towards the Soviet. Diplomatic relations were suspended by Mr. Baldwin's Cabinet after the famous "Arcos" raid, which proved conclusively that the Bolsheviks were abusing their diplomatic privileges. Mr. Macdonald has shown by his choice of colleagues that he does not propose to allow the Clydeside contingent to dictate to him, and he probably will give short shrift to any of his followers who try to link London with Moscow. The settlement of the reparations problem provides the new Government with a splendid chance to pursue a policy of constructive peace on the Continent. Locarno's fruits have taken some years to ripen; they are now ready to be plucked.

The World's Motor Cars.

It would be well if all Irish citizens could be shown, for a few hours, typical streets in England, France or the Scandinavian countries, with their thronging motor traffic; for what is seen in those lands to-day may be expected in Ireland a few years hence. In England there is one motor vehicle to every thirty-five persons, in France one to every thirty-seven persons, and in Scandinavia one to every fifty persons. The potential demand for motor vehicles, however, probably will not be satisfied in any European country until there are four times as many vehicles on the roads as now. This may be judged from the fact that in New Zealand and Canada there is one car to every nine persons, and in the United States one to every five. The present density of motor traffic in advanced European countries represents only an early stage in the development of the new transport, and we may assume that Ireland soon will reach at least that stage. An annual bulletin of data relative to the motor industry, which is published by the National Automobile Chamber of Commerce in New York, furnishes, beside the statistics which we have quoted, figures that show that the world outside the United States now possesses as many motor vehicles as the United States owned ten years ago. That total was 7,000,000, and the United States now possess 25,000,000 motor vehicles. The increase in registration in the United States is slackening; for virtually every person in North America who can find use for a car now possesses one. Manufacture in the United States, however, does not decline. The scrapping of old cars follows so speedily on the launching of new vehicles that the average life of a car shows a tendency to decrease, and now stands at six and three-quarter years, as compared with seven years in 1923. Improvement of models accounts for the early scrapping of cars. Nearly ninety per cent. of the cars built in 1928 were of the closed variety, as compared with thirty per cent. in 1923 and seven per cent. in 1918. Possessors of open cars now are impatient to be equipped with the more comfortable vehicle. Replacement, therefore, continues apace. American exports, moreover, continue to grow, despite the rapid growth in recent years of the British motor manufacturing industry. In effect, the enormous replacement demand in the United States gives to the United States industry a basis that facilitates the flooding of the world's market with cheap American vehicles. We may anticipate, then, a steady multiplication of motor vehicles on the streets of Ireland. Northern Ireland will possess nearly twice as many motor vehicles as now, and the Irish Free State nearly three times as many, before the ratio to population is equal to that now existing in England; and even then saturation of demand will be remote. Nevertheless, our Governments continue to leave the towns and cities of Ireland to a random method of growth as if we still were living in the age of the pony chaise and the donkey cart.

A German Battleship.

The new German pocket-battleship, the Ersatz Preussen, is another proof of the futility of efforts to assure the peace of the world by statute. This vessel complies in essence with all the requirements of the Treaty of Versailles, yet contrives to be the most lethal man-of-war afloat. According to the Naval Correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, it will be capable of firing twenty eleven-inch shells a minute, while its high angle of fire will enable it to outshoot all other ships, except possibly those of the Nelson class. A 23.6-inch torpedo—the largest in the world—will be carried, and the designed speed of twenty-six knots is expected confidently to be exceeded in practice. It is true that in certain respects, such as the ship's displacement and its torpedo armament, there are doubts whether the terms of the Treaty have not been understood somewhat elastically. The Treaty permits a displacement of 10,000 tons, but it seems that, as equipped for sea, this new product of German ingenuity will displace 13,000 tons; the difference is due to the interpretation placed by the designers on the permitted amount of fuel. These points, however, are but details. The fact remains that an inventive people has produced, without flagrant violation of the Treaty, a vessel of war infinitely more powerful than anything which was deemed possible in 1918. Mr. Macdonald declares that one of his first projects will be to get into touch with President Hoover on the subject of disarmament, and the good-will of all right-thinking people will be with him in this endeavour. At the same time we must not lose sight of the fact that, unless the will for peace is present, an arbitrary reduction in armaments merely makes war easier for such nations as may be sufficiently misguided to desire it. To-day, as always, any argument carried without a sense of proportion to its logical conclusion is a reductio ad absurdum. The true course is to render armaments unnecessary by means of real friendship among the nations.

Science and Vision.

The Archbishop of York has warned an audience of intelligent workers that "the perils of unscientific education are nothing to the perils of a purely scientific education." It is a noticeable feature of modern life that the tendency to extol science at the expense of everything else is paramount in many circles. As the result of a recent questionnaire, addressed by an English newspaper to its readers, asking who were the greatest men of all time, a large number, if not actually a majority, awarded the palm to Darwin, Pasteur and others such, as being the outstanding benefactors of the human race. Our veneration for these great men is profound, but we are not prepared to admit that the world of science—and science, after all, is nothing more or less than knowledge—has pride of place in the field of service to mankind. "Where there is no vision the people perish," said King Solomon. We endorse without reservation the words of the Archbishop when he declared that "there could be nothing worse for the world than to have people who possessed great intellectual capacity, with very little understanding of their fellow-citizens' life, upon whom they were to exercise their power." Knowledge admittedly is power, but without direction it degenerates very quickly into faddism. History is full of instances. St. Just, Robespierre, Lycurgus, in the name of reason, which was but a synonym for their own unamplified knowledge, contrived to inflict immeasurable woes on mankind. It was Voltaire who said that, if there had not been a God, it would have been necessary to invent one, and the arts, apart from all else, prove him right. "Mortals have many languages, the immortals one." The world owes as much to Beethoven as to Pasteur.

OBITUARY.

SIR WILLIAM J. THOMPSON.

We regret to announce that Sir William John Thompson, M.D., late Registrar-General for Ireland, died during last Sunday night at his residence, 59 Fitzwilliam square, Dublin, aged sixty-eight years. The news of Sir William's death will come as a shock to his many friends, who held him in sincere affection, and to the general community in Ireland, to whom he was well known by reputation. So late as Friday last he had attended the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland as lay member of a deputation from the Methodist Conference, and had delivered a speech welcoming the Assembly to Dublin. On Sunday last he attended both Services at the Methodist Centenary Church in St. Stephen's Green. In the afternoon he visited the Peamount Sanatorium, in which he had taken the warmest interest since its foundation: he remained chairman of its Committee of Management until the end. On that Sunday evening he had a few intimate friends to dinner, and appeared to be in his usual health. A few hours afterwards he passed quietly away in his sleep.

Sir William Thompson was born at Cavanaleck, Co. Tyrone, but his entire life since he was a student had been spent in Dublin. He followed a distinguished professional course of studies at the Royal College of Surgeons and at Trinity College, closing with the degree of Doctor of Medicine in the University of Dublin. He was elected demonstrator of anatomy to the College of Surgeons, and was appointed house physician in St. Vincent's Hospital. He later became a visiting physician and finally senior physician to Jervis Street Hospital. He was a Fellow and Past President of the College of Physicians and also of the Royal Academy of Medicine in Ireland, and held the position of President of the Leinster Branch of the British Medical Association.

A special share of his professional skill and energies was devoted to combating tuberculosis and infantile diseases. In the anti-tuberculosis campaign in Ireland he was a conspicuous figure, and became consulting physician to the National Hospital for Consumptives. During Lord Aberdeen's tenure of the Viceroyalty in Ireland Sir William Thompson was Physician-in-Ordinary to the Lord Lieutenant, and he received the honour of Knighthood in 1907. He was closely identified with all of Lady Aberdeen's activities in promoting a better condition of public health, notably with the supply of pure milk to children. Even after he became Registrar-General in 1909, he found an opportunity in the census returns of fixing public attention on the two causes, which he had made particularly his own. He retired from this office in 1925, when the statistical administration was entirely recast.

Apart from his manifold public duties, a word must be said about another aspect of the man. There were those who knew him as a devoted and efficient practitioner in private cases. Unsparing of himself, he combined professional skill with a kindness and modesty of manner which sought to obscure it, and established a lasting claim on the regard of his patients and their friends. In social life he was held in universal esteem.

SIR SYDNEY HUTCHINSON.

Sir Sydney Hutton Cooper Hutchinson, late Director-General of Telegraphs, India, died at his home at West Kensington yesterday. He was the third son of Dr. T. C. Hutchinson, Deputy Inspector-General of Hospitals, Indian Army. Sir Sydney Hutchinson joined the Indian Telegraph Department in 1871 as Assistant Superintendent.

FUNERAL OF ADMIRAL BURNEY.

DISTINGUISHED PALL-BEARERS.

There was a distinguished group of pall-bearers at the funeral of Admiral of the Fleet Sir Cecil Burney, which took place with full Service honours at Brookwood Cemetery yesterday.

The pall-bearers were Admirals of the Fleet Lord Jellicoe, Lord Wester Wemyss, and Sir Charles Madden; Admirals Sir Edmund Pears, Sir Herbert Heath, Sir Montague Browning, and Sir Percy Grant; Lieutenant-General Sir Reginald Stephens, Director-General of the Territorial Army; Rear-Admiral G. P. Ross, Rear-Admiral J. C. W. Henley, Paymaster Captain H. P. W. G. Murray, and Commander J. B. Kiton.

The King was represented by Admiral Sir Richard Phillimore, and the Prince of Wales by Admiral Sir Lionel Halsey.

The Service was conducted by Chaplain of the Fleet Archdeacon Knight Adkin, who was assisted by the Rev. C. F. Burrows, and the choral singing was done by boys from the London College of Choristers.

The coffin, of polished oak, was covered with the Union Jack, upon which was laid the Admiral's hat and sword. His decorations were borne on a cushion behind the coffin as it was carried into the church.

The remains were conveyed from the church to the graveside on a naval gun carriage, the procession being headed by the Royal Marines Band from Portsmouth. Naval detachments from H.M.S. Victory and H.M.S. Excellent at Portsmouth escorted the gun carriage, and a firing party from Portsmouth fired three volleys over the grave while the buglers of the Royal Marines sounded "The Last Post."

Wreaths were sent by the Lords of the Admiralty and the Army Council.

LONDON LETTER.

THE KING'S PROGRESS.

59 FLEET STREET, LONDON,
MONDAY NIGHT.

A bulletin was issued from Windsor Castle this morning of a very satisfactory character, inasmuch as it is likely to be the last for several days. The King is making really rapid progress. He is able to get out of doors again, after moving about freely in his room for the past few days, in addition to disposing of the State business necessitated by the change of Government. It is probable that His Majesty will be able to join the members of his family in the usual daily life before the close of the week.

A rumour that the King may go to Piestant, in Czecho-Slovakia, at the end of this month or the beginning of next month is likely to prove correct. Lord Dawson of Penn was on the Continent when he was recalled following the King's chill a fortnight ago, and it is thought that he was making arrangements for the King's stay there. Piestant is becoming increasingly popular as a health resort because of its lovely surroundings in the western Carpathians, but it is sufficiently far removed from the big towns to prevent it from becoming overcrowded. It would probably be more beneficial than a Mediterranean cruise; for it is famous as a spa for rheumatic troubles, and it is this development which has been troubling the King lately.

The National Anthem.

The Trinity College incident excites little interest here, and few people care to express an opinion whether the National Anthem should be accompanied by "The Soldier's Song" or not, though surprise is expressed that the direct representative of the Sovereign should find it desirable to make a request for an anthem of any kind. In the overseas Dominions generally the National Anthem is given as a matter of course when the Governor-General attends a function of any kind, since it impresses most strongly upon the people the fact that he occupies a position placed above mere parties and politics; but a growing custom, particularly in Canada, is that a local patriotic air is given during the proceedings, such as "O, Canada," or something similar and as well known. In such cases the ballad is not of a partisan character, but usually extols the beauty of the motherland or its characteristics. Official circles naturally hesitate to take any view at all on the matter, considering it to be peculiarly domestic in its incidence.

The writer of the "Londoner's Diary" in the Evening Standard, commenting upon the Governor-General's refusal to attend the Trinity College celebrations unless "The Soldiers' Song" is played as the National Anthem, says:—"'The Soldiers' Song' is looked upon as the Marseillaise of the Sinn Fein movement, but, musically considered, was never anywhere near the same class." "Personally," he adds, "if I were an Irishman, I should hate the idea of depressing every public event by its performance." In Italy also there is trouble over what was once the party tune—the irritating "Giovanezza"—of the Fascisti. Signor Mussolini has now ordered that it shall be played only on formal occasions to prevent any loss of its dignity.

Old Comrades.

A goodly muster of the Old Comrades' Association of the Connaught Rangers met on the Horse Guards' Parade yesterday morning, and marched to the Cenotaph, where, at half-past ten, a very beautiful wreath was placed by General J. Hume, who has had the distinction of suffering no fewer than nine war wounds without gaining a medal—because they were received in the Boer War. General Darrell Talbot Hammond was in command of the parade, which was watched with great interest by a big crowd.

A Talking Film.

Mr. Ramsay Macdonald fully realises how sweet are the use of advertisement. He seized a favourable opportunity last Saturday evening to broadcast his opinions, and this morning he had a crowd of Pressmen to watch photographers take a talking film of the members of his Government in the garden at 10 Downing street. All the Cabinet was present, with the exception of the new Lord Chancellor, who was being sworn in at the Court of Appeal. Mr. Macdonald made quite a good compère in this interesting little show, and brightened the proceedings with several flashes of humour. This talking film will be distributed throughout the country so that the electorate may see for itself the personnel of its new Government.

Unemployment.

Mr. Macdonald's reference in his broadcast statement to "what has been called normality" in regard to unemployment will revive discussion as to what the normal level really is. At the time when the Amending Act, based upon the Blanesburgh Report, was passed it was estimated that by 1929 the number should have fallen to 800,000. The number this year was still much above that total, and the coming into force of regulations relating to the number of contributions necessary to qualify for the unemployment allowance was postponed. "Normality" in this connection is a somewhat vague expression, but, in the absence of any better definition, it is for the present interpreted as a reduction of the unemployed to 800,000.

Mr. Jowitt's Quick Change.

It is probable that something will be said concerning the defection of Mr. Jowitt when the Liberals meet on Thursday; for the leaders of the party are really very angry at what they call his desertion. The real point, however, is that they fear that Mr. Jowitt's departure may be followed by others when the Government gets to work; for it is recognised that the Socialists mean to break up the Liberal Party if they can, and will do much to attract individual members into their ranks. In Socialist circles it is said that there will be no bargaining whatever with the Liberals, since there will be no necessity, because the Liberals will have to support the Government. In regard to the expected demand for electoral reform from the Liberal benches, the Socialists will wait and see what is asked, and then will treat it as a mere expression of opinion if it does not meet their views.

11 Downing Street.

Mr. and Mrs. Philip Snowden intend to take up their residence at the official home of the Chancellor of the Exchequer, No. 11 Downing street. Mrs. Snowden is very well known as a hostess, with literary and artistic, as well as political, interests. It is probable that there will be a considerable amount of entertaining at No. 11, since both Mr. and Mrs. Snowden are very hospitable, and the great rooms of their new house will lend themselves to the conversazione form of entertainment which they prefer.

A By-election.

It is unlikely that all the names mentioned in connection with Peerages in the coming Resignation Honours will find a place in Mr. Baldwin's list; for gossip has been busy with the names of several members of his Cabinet. It is generally assumed, however, that Sir W. Joynson-Hicks will be transferred to the Lords, in which case there will be a by-election at Twickenham. This is regarded as a perfectly sound Conservative seat; for, though the majority was reduced at the general election, various circumstances combined to operate against the Home Secretary. Should this prove the first by-election, the result will show a larger majority against the Socialists than at the general election, particularly if Sir Thomas Inskip, the late Attorney-General, is selected as the Conservative candidate.

MR. MACDONALD'S VISIT TO WASHINGTON.

MAY MAKE TRIP PLANNED FOR MR. BALDWIN.

NAVAL DISARMAMENT.

AMERICANS WELCOME SUGGESTED TALK WITH MR. HOOVER.

(FROM "THE TIMES" PARLIAMENTARY CORRESPONDENT).

It is known that Mr. Baldwin, had he continued in office as Prime Minister, had intended to pay a personal visit to the President of the United States this autumn, and there seems every reason now to hope that Mr. Macdonald may decide to make the journey—a step which will be welcomed as a proof of continuity in British foreign policy.

If the project is carried out, the Prime Minister will presumably go to the United States after the House of Commons adjourns in July, and before it reassembles towards the end of October. He has also expressed a desire to go to Geneva for the next meeting of the Assembly of the League of Nations; so that it is clear that he intends to take a keen personal interest in all matters of foreign policy.

MR. MACDONALD'S HOLIDAY.

GOING TO SCOTLAND TO-DAY.

Mr. Macdonald may visit Geneva and Washington before the end of the year, if circumstances permit.

Meanwhile, the new Prime Minister is going to Scotland for a much-needed rest. He leaves King's Cross at 7.30 this evening for Lossiemouth, where he will remain until about the end of next week, returning to London for the meeting of Parliament on June 25th.

Mr. Macdonald has himself announced that he hopes to pay a short visit to Geneva at the opening of the Assembly of the League of Nations next September.

VISIT TO WASHINGTON.

It is understood that he is also contemplating a visit to the United States. Much will depend on the circumstances of the political situation. Mr. Macdonald is personally keenly interested in all aspects of the question of Anglo-American relations, and especially the disarmament problem.

"I shall watch the American situation," he said in his broadcast speech last Saturday, "because I feel it to be of such importance that no misunderstandings should exist between our two countries."

ALLAYING MISUNDERSTANDINGS.

He is now contemplating a visit to Washington, because he feels that personal contact with the President would more speedily allay misunderstandings, and promote the better relations of the two countries than any other method.

If a suitable opportunity occurs, Mr. Macdonald may go to Washington in August or September, when Parliament is in recess.

RECEPTION AT LOSSIEMOUTH.

Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, who will be accompanied by Miss Ishbel, and his secretary, Miss Rosenberg, will arrive at Lossiemouth, about 11 o'clock on Wednesday morning. The local town council's arrangements for his welcome include a bonfire on the Coulard Hill. There is likely to be a popular demonstration at the station by wives and daughters of the fishermen, who are at present absent on the West Coast.

POLITICAL PARTIES NOW.

With the announcement to-day of the result of the Scottish combined Universities elections, the general election is now complete, except for the deferred Rugby contest. Two Conservatives and a Liberal were again returned for the Scottish Universities, making the present state of the parties and their total votes:—

PARTY.	MEMBERS.	VOTES.
LABOUR	288	8,319,892
CONSERVATIVES...	259	8,575,905
LIBERALS	58	5,247,378
INDEPENDENTS ...	9	260,711
COMMUNISTS ...	0	50,614
TOTAL	614

In the foregoing table Mr. Jowitt, K.C., who has hitherto counted in the Liberal total, is included in the list of Labour members. Mr. Neil McLean, M.P. for Govan, on the other hand, is included among the Independents.

WASHINGTON'S VIEW.

"A WARM WELCOME PROMISED."

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Monday.

High Washington officials are greatly interested in Mr. Ramsay Macdonald's reported intention of seeking a personal conference with President Hoover on Anglo-American relations.

Reuter's Correspondent is informed that the reports of the Prime Minister's desire for a meeting with the President reached the White House some time last week.

NO OFFICIAL WORD.

The source of these reports and the manner in which they were transmitted are, however, not divulged, and the White House officials have maintained silence on the matter, except that they state that no official word has yet been received, and that until that was forthcoming they prefer to remain silent.

Mr. Stimson, the Secretary of State, also declines to discuss the subject.

The Congressional leaders were, however, not so reticent. Senator Borah, in particular, regards the proposal with approval. In addition to Senator Borah, Mr. Tilson (Connecticut) and Mr. Garner (Texas), the Republican and Democratic leaders in the House of Representatives, declared themselves enthusiastically in favour of the idea.

Despite the official silence, Washington observers are strongly of opinion that the Administration would welcome an opportunity for a personal meeting between the heads of the two Governments.

Mr. Hoover, as the world knows, is particularly anxious to advance the cause of disarmament, and has emphasised the belief again and again that the reduction of existing sea armaments should be effected.

The opinion, too, was general that a meeting between Mr. Hoover and Mr. Macdonald would be likely to bear good fruit in this direction, since disarmament is a problem which primarily concerns Great Britain and the United States.

"A WARM WELCOME."

The Evening Star, which usually reflects the views of the Administration, says that Mr. Macdonald "would find a warm welcome here." It goes on to say that a conference between the President and the Prime Minister, both of whom have the cause of naval limitation at heart, "could scarcely fail to have important results."

AN AMERICAN COMMENT.

Commenting on Mr. Macdonald's reported proposal to visit the United States within the next two months the New York Evening Post says that full advantage should be taken of the proposal, and that a face to face talk at Washington would be approved by both peoples.

The paper (says Reuter) continues: "It is odd, but true, that Mr. Macdonald can visit us without exciting any of that old 'chase the redcoat down the lane' animosity that might greet a Cecil, a Balfour, or an Asquith."

POLITICAL NOTES.

QUESTION ABOUT THE SHANNON SCHEME.

FROM OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

Already two nominations have been made for the vacancies caused in the Free State Senate by the death of Mrs. Stopford Green and the resignation of the Marquess of Lansdowne. Miss Kathleen Brown (Wexford) has been nominated by Senators Sir Thomas Esmond and Mrs. Costello for the first vacancy, and Mr Laurence O'Neill, former Lord Mayor of Dublin, has been nominated by Senator A. Byrne for the second vacancy.

It is expected that there will be several other nominations before the period appointed for their submission expires to-morrow.

Both Chambers of the Oireachtas will meet to-morrow. In the Dail the principal business will be the Finance Bill, but Mr. O. Esmond has intimated his intention of raising the question of the propriety of the Labour Deputy-Speaker's participation in the recent British general election. Mr. Morrissey, it may be remembered, addressed meetings on behalf of Socialist candidates.

Mr. Briscoe (Fianna Fail), I believe, intends to draw the attention of the Minister for Industry and Commerce to recent statements regarding the Shannon scheme.

It is the present intention of the Executive Council that the House shall not sit during the Emancipation Week Celebrations, and shall adjourn for the summer recess about the 15th July.

HAULBOWLINE.

MAINTENANCE CHARGES REDUCED.

FROM OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

Confirmation of the report that Haulbowline, the former British Admiralty dockyard, will close down completely on 1st September next, was not forthcoming from official quarters yesterday.

What has been decided by the Free State Minister for Finance, I am informed, is that a reduction of £5,000 shall be made in the maintenance cost of the yard. Last year the cost of maintenance was £17,000, but it is felt that the nominal cost should be far below this figure. The reduction which it now proposed to make will, of course, result in the disemployment of a number of workers.

THE APPOINTMENT OF BISHOPS.

CHURCH OF ENGLAND PROPOSALS.

Important changes in the method of appointing bishops are suggested in the report of the Bishops' Committee appointed in 1923, which will come under consideration at the next session of the Church Assembly in England.

The Committee, which was presided over by the Bishop of Manchester and included the present Archbishop of York (Dr. Temple) and the Bishops of Chichester, Ely, Gloucester and Oxford, recommends that the electing body should have the right to refuse to elect the person named in the King's Letter Missive without incurring penalty. This power, the Committee points out, should be purely negative; it would be open to the Crown to override the decision of the electing body by Letters Patent under the Great Seal.

It is also suggested that the Archbishops of Canterbury and York should not be liable to penalty for refusing to confirm or to consecrate a person elected as bishop. The Prime Minister, before making a recommendation to the King, should consult an advisory committee of not less than seven persons, including the two Archbishops, to be chosen by the Prime Minister from the Church Assembly.

The Committee thought that the main objects could be secured by a little alteration of the present system. They wanted to secure that no Prime Minister should act in such a grave matter without having received advice, and it was desirable "to remove the suspicion of unreality from the ceremonies of electon and confirmation."

YELLOW BIRD'S PILOT MARRIED.

ATLANTIC AIRMEN READY TO START.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

OLD ORCHARD, MAINE, Monday.

M. Jean Assolant, the pilot of the French aeroplane Yellow Bird, which is shortly to take off on a trans-Atlantic flight, was married at Portland this afternoon by special licence, to Miss Pauline Parker, of New York.

Weather conditions over the Atlantic are rapidly improving, and both the Yellow Bird and the American 'plane, Green Flash, are expected to start on their trans-Atlantic flights any day now.

DEATH OF COLONEL DUNVILLE.

A DARING AERONAUT.

Lieutenant-Colonel John D. Dunville, D.L., the noted aeronaut, died yesterday, after a brief illness, at his London residence in Portland place, aged sixty-three years. The son of the late Robert Grimshaw Dunville, he was born at Redburn, near Holywood, County Down, and was educated at Cambridge. He was chairman of Messrs. Dunville and Company, Ltd., the well-known Belfast distillers.

A keen sportsman, in his youth, he was an enthusiastic cross-country rider, and a skilful polo player. During the seasons 1886 and 1887 he was Master of the Cambridge Staghounds, and he held the Mastership of the Meath Hounds from 1911 to 1915.

Politics at first attracted him. In 1890 he was appointed political private secretary to the Marquis of Hartington (afterwards Duke of Devonshire); he founded the Liberal Unionist Party, and he held that office till the Duke died in 1908.

FROM POLITICS TO AIR.

From politics, Lieutenant-Colonel Dunville turned to aeronautics, and here the spirit of adventure born of sport found ample scope. Soon he took his place among the foremost and most daring of balloonists. Twice he crossed the English Channel by balloon to France. In November, 1908, he piloted the Banshee, the first balloon to cross the English Channel with four passengers. The story of that interesting performance is best told in his own words:—

"I was competing for the Northcliffe Cup . . . Accompanied by Mrs. John Dunville, Mr. Pollock, and Mr. Philip Gardner, I left London at 2.15 p.m. on Saturday, and, reaching Folkestone in three hours, crossed the Channel, arriving over the French coast, just south of Calais, at 6.15 p.m. When passing Lille the wind began to shift to the west, and at 11.50 p.m. we passed over Brussels. Shortly afterwards the wind came right round to the south. Very heavy rain came on, accompanied by snow, and I found myself, at 1 a.m. on Sunday, travelling due north at a greatly increased speed, so that it was evident that I should be carried to the North Sea in two or three hours. I, therefore, decided to make a descent, which notwithstanding the darkness of the night, was safely accomplished at 1.20 a.m. at a place called Baelen, in the North of Belgium, about sixty miles east of Antwerp. If the wind had not altered I would have made a very long run, but, as it was, I only went about 260 miles, and was up 11 hours 5 minutes."

THE NORTHCLIFFE CUP.

In La Mascotte, in September, 1907, Lt.-Col. Dunville won the Northcliffe Challenge Cup, which was awarded to the British aeronaut who, starting from any place in England, made the longest voyage during the year. He flew from London to Wales, covering a distance of nearly 200 miles. In November of the following year his wife accompanied him on a cross-Channel flight in the Banshee.

Lt.-Col. Dunville took part in the international race for the Gordon-Bennett Cup. Two hundred machines started from Berlin, among them being the Banshee. It was at first announced that he was winner, for he made a trip of nearly 37 hours' duration. The terms were that the cup should go to the balloon that travelled farthest in a straight line between the points of ascent and landing. Much disappointment was expressed by British aeronauts when the cup was awarded to the Swiss balloon Helvetia, which had fallen into the sea, its occupants being rescued by a steam trawler.

In 1910 Lieutenant-Colonel Dunville, accompanied by Mr. C. W. Pollock, ascended at ten o'clock at night from the Dublin Gas Works, and in the balloon St. Louis flew to Macclesfield, a distance of 160 miles, in some five hours. At one stage in her flight the St. Louis rose to an altitude of 10,000 feet above sea level.

WAR SERVICE.

From balloons to aeroplanes was a natural transition. He joined the Royal Naval Air Force as Flight-Lieutenant in March of 1915, and by 1917 had been promoted Wing Commander. He commanded the No. 1 Balloon Training Wing at Roehampton, and had 450 officers and 2,000 men under his control. Thence, in 1918, he transferred to the Royal Air Force, and in September, 1919, he was demobilised and created C.B.E.

Lieutenant-Colonel Dunville married Violet Anne, daughter of the late Mr. Gustavus Lambert, of Beau Parc, County Meath. He is survived by his wife and two sons. A third son—Lieutenant John Spencer Dunville, 1st Royal Dragoons—fell in the Great War and received the posthumous award of a V.C.

THE KING'S PROGRESS.

EMINENTLY SATISFACTORY.

Four doctors yesterday saw the King at Windsor Castle, and, after a long consultation, issued the following bulletin at 11.15 a.m.:—

"His Majesty the King is making progress.

"The abscess is diminishing in size.

"The general health is good.

"(Signed),

"HENRY L. MARTYN,
"STANLEY HEWETT,
"HUGH M. RIGBY,
"DAWSON OF PENN."

Sir Hugh M. Rigby is the surgeon who operated on the King during his recent illness at Buckingham Palace. Yesterday he saw His Majesty for the first time since the present abscess developed.

In Court circles the bulletin is regarded as being eminently satisfactory, and as recording an even greater improvement in the King's condition than might have been expected. The doctors, indeed, consider it unnecessary to issue a further bulletin for two or three days.

His Majesty yesterday was able to spend some time in the grounds of Windsor Castle enjoying the fine weather and fresh air.

The King's medical advisers decided that, in view of the improvement reported in yesterday's bulletin, and also in view of the excellent weather, there could be no objection to his going out. His Majesty, therefore, walked from the Royal apartments to the grounds and enjoyed the sunshine for about half-an-hour.

FIRE AT MERTON COLLEGE.

STUDENTS IN PYJAMAS SALVE FURNITURE.

A fire which broke out at Merton College, Oxford, in the early hours of yesterday morning was first discovered by an undergraduate named Bernard, who awoke to see a light shining under his bedroom door. He found that the oak panelling around the sittingroom fireplace was ablaze.

He gave the alarm, and the fire brigade on arrival found that the whole of the sittingroom and part of the bedroom were burning.

About forty undergraduates, working in their pyjamas, rescued the contents of the neighbouring rooms and of the junior common room, situated immediately below. The outbreak was extinguished in about an hour.

Captain William Redmond, T.D., who has been unable to attend the Dail for some time past on account of illness, is recovering.

RAID ON DUTCH ISLAND.

SOLDIERS KILLED BY VENEZUELANS.

ANGER IN HOLLAND

WARSHIP SENT TO THE SCENE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WASHINGTON, Monday.

A raid by a band of Venezuelan revolutionists on the little island of Curacao, in the Dutch West Indies, has caused quite a stir in Latin-American diplomatic circles here.

Hitherto Curacao has been known chiefly as the original home of a fine liqueur made from the peel of a special brand of orange, and all the American papers are obliged to-day to publish elaborate maps explaining to the public where Curacao is.

There is no tendency in official circles to regard the matter as at all serious, or as more than an effervescent display of Latin-American revolutionary ebullience. The news that the Dutch Government is sending a warship to Curacao is viewed calmly, and there seems no likelihood that even the most Chauvinistic of Senators is likely to invoke the Monroe Doctrine.

U.S. CONSUL'S REPORT.

Official despatches received by the State Department from the American Consul at Curacao state that the armed band of Venezuelans which attacked Willemstad consisted of revolutionaries, who seized a supply of arms and ammunition, and also the American steamship Maracaibo.

The Consul states in his report that three hundred Venezuelans captured the police headquarters at Willemstad and forced the Governor of Curacao to request the Maracaibo to transport them to Venezuela. The arms and ammunition were taken from the stores of the military police to the Maracaibo, which sailed at 2 o'clock on Sunday morning.

The Consul added that there were reports that the revolutionaries took with them as hostages the Governor, the Chief of Police, and a number of senior police officers.

After the departure of the Maracaibo the situation became quiet, and a large force of volunteer police came on duty.

Several soldiers are reported to have been killed and wounded during the attack.

HOSTAGES RETURNED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

WILLEMSTAAD, CURACAO, Sunday.

For a time the raiders were in complete control of the waterfront, and several police officers were killed and wounded in an attempt to overpower them.

The raiders eventually left, taking the Maracaibo with them, temporarily, and landed on the Venezuelan coast some miles north of Lavela.

The Maracaibo then returned to Curacao with the Dutch officials, neither of whom had been harmed.

DUTCH NAVAL ACTIVITY.

QUESTIONS FOR COLONIAL MINISTER.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

THE HAGUE, Monday.

The raid on Willemstaad has aroused much indignation in Holland.

M. Colyn, a member of the First Chamber, has addressed the following questions to the Minister for the Colonies in reference to the raid by an armed band of five hundred Venezuelans on Willemstaad, Curacao, on Saturday last. In these he asks: (1) Will the Government obtain at the earliest moment full information regarding the events in the Isle of Curacao, which are so damaging to our international reputation? (2) Will the Government make it clear how it came about that a band of five hundred Venezuelans could be so strongly armed that they were able to overcome the military police force? (3) Will the Government give an assurance that it will take measures of a permanent nature with a view to preventing a repetition of events so humiliating to our colonial authority and our international reputation?"

DESPATCH OF LANDING FORCES.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

AMSTERDAM, Monday.

The torpedo boat Kortenaer is leaving the naval station of Nieuwediep this evening for the Hook of Holland, where a detachment of forty landing forces will be taken aboard to-morrow morning. The Kortenaer will then at once proceed to Curacao to be ready if any further incidents should occur.

The cruiser, Hertzog Hendrik, is also being held in readiness to start for Curacao if necessary.

The Foreign Minister, Jonkheer Beelaerts van Blokland, stated to-day that he did not consider the incident at Willemstaad likely to cause any conflict between Venezuela and Holland, because it was only a question of a "Putsch" by irresponsible people.

"CARELESSNESS."

In connection with the incidents at Willemstaad, the Handelsblad, in a leading article, says: "They are the consequence of unbelievable carelessness on the part of the Dutch Government which, notwithstanding the suggestions of the former Governor and the naval experts, neglected to assure adequate protection for our historical possessions in the Caribbean Sea and the maintenance of order."

NORWEGIAN CITY TO BE RE-NAMED

DESPITE LOCAL PROTEST.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

OSLO, Monday.

The proposal that the City of Trondhjem should be named Nidaros, as from January 1st, 1930, which has already been adopted by the Odelsting, was this evening adopted by the Lagting by 20 votes to 18. The decision of the two Houses was made in spite of the unanimous protest of the Trondhjem City Council.

PERSIAN REVOLT.

AIR SERVICE STILL MAINTAINED.

FROM THE SPECIAL CORRESPONDENT OF "THE TIMES."

SHIRAZ, Monday.

The general situation at Shiraz is one of blockade, but the Junkers air service with Teheran and Bushire is still being maintained. It is doubtful if any other tribes have joined the Kashgais, but local brigands are co-operating with them.

Apparently the Government troops have been instructed to remain on the defensive, and there has been no air bombing during the negotiations, but so far no settlement has been reached.

The trouble started in the middle of April with the Arab tribe of the Baharlu, east of Shiraz, in the Fasadorab and Jahrum districts. The main questions involved were the new opium monopoly and the military governorships. It rapidly spread to the Kashgais, who suspended their customary seasonal migration to the North and became refractory.

PARIS TRAMS TO DISAPPEAR.

EFFORT TO SOLVE THE TRAFFIC PROBLEM.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

PARIS, Monday.

So critical is the traffic problem in Paris that the complete suppression of surface lines is envisaged by the transport authorities.

A project to this effect is being prepared by M. Jayot, engineer in charge of traffic for the Prefecture of the Seine.

During the last five years, M. Jayot declares, the tramcar has proved almost worthless, not only in the heart of Paris, where some have been taken off, but almost in the whole area within the city walls.

THE SNAIL-LIKE TRAM.

The congestion is extreme in some of the streets of the capital, many of which are so exceedingly narrow that tramcars take half an hour to travel a few hundred yards.

"The public has long ago realised this," says M. Jayot, "and the proof is that where, in 1923, tramways and motor 'buses carried more passengers than the underground railways, now the Metropolitan Underground carries one hundred and forty million passengers a year more than the surface systems.

IMPROVEMENT SCHEME.

"The plan is to move all the termini at least outside the ring of the boulevards. Those near the Opera and the Madeleine cause the greatest congestion, as they are the two heaviest focal points of the city's traffic.

"When this is done it will be arranged so that the 'bus and Metro will connect with all the outlying termini, and transfers, which do not now exist in Paris, will be issued."

FAR EAST FLIGHT CUT SHORT.

MR. VAN LEAR BLACK'S MACHINE WRECKED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

CALCUTTA, Monday.

While landing to-day at Dumdum Aerodrome, near Calcutta, after flying from Allahabad, Mr. Van Lear Black's giant Fokker aeroplane crashed to the ground. The nose of the machine buried itself into the earth, which was soft as the result of the recent heavy monsoon rains. The machine was wrecked, but the five occupants escaped without injury.

The remainder of the flight to the Far East has been abandoned, and the remnants of the machine are being shipped to America.

SWEDISH ATTEMPT TO FLY TO U.S.A.

AEROPLANE ARRIVES AT REYKJAVIK.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

REYKJAVIK, Tuesday.

The Sverige arrived here safely at 7.48 o'clock last night.

Captain Ahrenberg's aeroplane, which left Stockholm at 6 o'clock on Sunday morning, in an attempt to fly to New York, was forced to come down on the water at Skaptaros, owing to engine trouble.

The disabled machine was afterwards taken in tow by the Icelandic inspection ship Odin.

It is expected that the flight will be resumed after repairs have been effected.

PREPARATIONS IN NEW YORK.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Monday.

Elaborate preparations have been made, not only by the Swedish Colony, but also by the whole of New York, to welcome Captain Ahrenberg and the other Swedish airmen on the conclusion of their trans-Atlantic flight. It is understood that the celebrations include a military review on Governor's Island, a formal reception by the Mayor, and a parade through Fifth Avenue and Broadway.

An important Reception Committee has been formed, of which the chairman is Major-General Ivor Thor-Ray, who, though of Swedish birth, had a distinguished career in the British Army, and was formerly President of the British Great War Veterans of America. A big banquet and ball has also been planned at the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

ATLANTIC FLIGHT HELD UP.

SPANISH ACTION EXPLAINED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

MADRID, Monday.

The Military Attaché of the French Embassy this morning called at the headquarters of the Spanish Aviation authorities to inquire on what grounds the French aviators, Couduret and Maillou, had been refused permission to leave the aerodrome at Tablada on their proposed flight to America.

The Director of Spanish Aviation replied that, as the French aviators had not been authorised to undertake this flight by their own authorities, the Superior Aviation Council had decided not to sanction their departure until the approval of the French authorities had been received.

RAILWAY SHOPMEN'S EMPLOYMENT.

CONFERENCES BEGUN.

FROM OUR LABOUR CORRESPONDENT.

When the "stay-in" strike of Great Southern Railways (Ireland) shopmen was called off last Tuesday night, it was arranged that a series of joint conferences should be held between the representatives of the company and the men's trade unions, with a view to reaching an amicable settlement of the dispute, which arose from the company's proposed revision of wages and hours.

The first of these conferences took place yesterday, under the chairmanship of Mr. D. Sullivan, of the Ministry of Industry and Commerce; and, while no definite decisions were taken, I understand that a good deal of progress was made.

A further joint conference will be held to-morrow afternoon.

MILLIONAIRE MURDERER.

LAST MINUTE APPEAL AGAINST LIFE SENTENCE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

LIMOGES, Monday.

Charles Barataud, the millionaire murderer, has signified his intention of making a last-minute appeal. A "Black Maria" has been waiting at the police station to transport him to an unknown destination as a precaution against further disorders.

[NOTE.—Barataud was sentenced to penal servitude for life last Friday, escaping the death penalty on account of a technical slip and, in some degree, because the jury found that there were extenuating circumstances in the murder of Bertrand Pinet, Barataud's best friend. Barataud, also killed a taxi driver, and the jury returned a verdict of wilful murder in both cases. The trial was marked by the extraordinary interest of the crowd which surrounded the courthouse and demonstrated against the murderer with the utmost vehemence].

LATE NEWS.

SOUTH AFRICAN ELECTION.

RESULT OF TO-MORROW'S POLL UNCERTAIN.

FROM "THE TIMES" CORRESPONDENT.

CAPE TOWN, Monday.

The result of the general election in the Union on Wednesday is most uncertain. In the last House of Assembly there were 135 seats; in the new House there will be 148.

Owing to the death of a candidate, the election in one constituency has been postponed. The increase of seats is due to the growth of the population, the Cape Province now having seven seats more than in 1924, the Transvaal five more seats, and the Free State one more.

If there has been a swing towards General Smuts throughout the country, however small, he will win; but has there been such a swing?

The view of most observers is that General Hertzog and Colonel Creswell will win again, though with a very reduced majority; but probably there is more dissatisfaction with the Government than many people realise. Should General Smuts win, he will most likely do so by a comparatively large majority—between ten and fifteen. But all forecasts are most speculative.

THE POSSIBILITIES OF EMPIRE.

OPPORTUNITY FOR LABOUR GOVERNMENT.

In a leading article The Times observes:—It is to be hoped that the absence of any mention of an Empire policy in the pronouncements—admittedly only introductory—of members of the new Administration does not mean that Empire development is to be given a lower place than it deserves in any general scheme. No one will deny that Empire development might be advanced by a certain reorganisation of the Colonial Office and of the agencies connected with it, for which the talents of Mr. Webb are well adapted, but it also requires a special vision of the Empire's possibilities and a special knowledge of Empire problems which have not hitherto been associated with his statistical labours. This new Government will have a special chance, and, therefore, a special duty to consolidate Imperial relations.

As a market for British goods, the Empire already takes just under one-half of our total exports, and just over one-half of our exports of manufactures. The four great Dominions buy from us per head of their population twelve times as much as the inhabitants of France, Germany and the United States. The Colonies are not only a great and expanding market, but an increasingly valuable source of raw materials. On their side, neither the Dominions nor the Colonies are likely to forget that Great Britain is the greatest market in the world, and already takes some 30 per cent. of her total imports from them.

Seldom, if ever, have economic interests accorded more closely with sentimental interests. The situation needs only to be stated to show how totally irrelevant is any suggestion that Empire development involves either the dumping overseas of British unemployed, or the "exploitation of subject races." The economic links of Empire do not need to be forged. They are there, and a plain declaration by the Labour Government at the outset of its career, that it intends to recognise and to strengthen them, would be the best recommendation to the nation to give it the latitude which it demands.

VATICAN CITY.

CONSTITUTION COMES INTO FORCE.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

VATICAN CITY, Tuesday.

The fundamental law of Vatican City State—in other words, the State's Constitution—came into force to-day. By it all powers are vested in the Pope, who has complete legislative and judicial power, but during an interregnum between the death of one Pope and the election of another, they will be assumed by the College of Cardinals.

The Pontiff may delegate part of his executive power to the Governor of Vatican City, who will be responsible only to the Pope. Similarly the Pontiff reserves the right to approve the Budget of Vatican City, submitted by the Governor. Civil cases will be tried by a tribunal yet to be appointed, and the Sacred Roman Rota and the Supreme Tribunal, known as the Apostolic Signature, will function as Courts of Appeal. Criminal cases will be tried by a special Court, consisting of one or more officials nominated by the Governor of the Vatican City. If any citizen of Vatican City feels that his rights or interests have been damaged by some administrative act of officials of the city, he can appeal to the Pope through the Counsellor-General.

The flag of the Vatcan City will be white and yellow, bearing in the centre the cross-keys and the triregnum. The Coat of Arms will be gules, two cross-keys, supporting a triregnum.

Canon law and the Apostolic Constitutions, as well as any laws issued by the Pope or by officials duly authorised by him, will be the foundation of the Vatican City's legal system in cases not covered by these laws, the laws of the Kingdom of Italy, as well as regulations issued by the Province of Rome and the Governor of Rome, will be applied, provided that they do not conflict with the principles of Canon Law and the provisions of the Lateran Treaties.

THE DUKE OF GLOUCESTER.

HIS RETURN HOME DELAYED.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

VANCOUVER, Monday.

The Duke of Gloucester, who was to have resumed his eastward journey home to-day, will remain here for a few days longer, until his collar-bone, which he fractured when playing polo recently, has completely healed. The doctors in attendance on the Duke state that the date of his departure must depend upon whether his progress continues satisfactory during the next few days.

SIR BRYAN MAHON.

CONDITION REPORTED TO BE CRITICAL.

General Sir Bryan Mahon, who has for some weeks been a patient in a nursing home attached to St. Vincent's Hospital, Dublin, is seriously ill. It was learned early this morning that his condition was critical.

GRASSHOPPER PLAGUE.

THIRTY TONS OF DEAD.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

SOFIA, Monday.

Swarms of grasshoppers have descended upon the village of Haskog, where more than 30 tons of grasshoppers have been killed by the inhabitants. This slaughter, however, is having a negligible effect upon the swarms still flying over the district daily beclouding the skies.

Already tremendous damage has been done to the crops.

Mr. Lloyd George has promised to preside on Bardic Chair Day at the National Eisteddfod at Liverpool in August.

The Right Rev. Monsignor McMahon, P.P., V.G., Nenagh, has completed his sixty-first year in the priesthood.

THE NATIONAL ANTHEM.

OFFICIAL VIEWS.

SUPPORT FOR GOVERNOR-GENERAL.

FROM OUR POLITICAL CORRESPONDENT.

The Governor-General's refusal to attend Trinity College Races, because the College Sports Committee would not give an undertaking that only "The Soldiers' Song" would be played in honour of his visit, will be the subject of questions in the Free State Parliament to-morrow.

If the Executive Council can avoid it, I do not think that there will be much discussion of the matter, the official attitude ostensibly being that the issues, if any, raised by Mr. McNeill's action are trivial and unworthy of comment or excitement.

The unofficial view of the Executive, so far as I can ascertain it, is more important. To begin with, it may be stated that members of the Ministry are in full accord with the "stand" taken by the King's representative.

"APPROVED."

Whether the initiative was taken by His Excellency on this particular occasion is not quite clear; but, if it were, it can be assumed, I am assured, that he first acquainted the Executive Council with his intentions, and received an intimation of its approval. The difficulty in marking the source of "initiative" is that the process of opposition to the British National Anthem began some years ago.

At that time the initiative was taken by the Executive Council, which, either through its individual members, their friends or prominent members of their staffs, conveyed occasionally to the promoters of certain functions that it would be acceptable to the Government if the promoters saw that the Free State Anthem were included in the programme.

There were significant results in a few cases in which the promoters could not agree that there was any reason for changing the Anthem with which it had always been customary to receive His Majesty's representative.

REQUEST TO THE R.D.S.

A notable one was that of the Dublin Horse Show. It is not generally known, I think, that the Executive Council had conveyed to the Royal Dublin Society a "request" that a prominent place should be found for the Free State Anthem and flag during the Show.

The Society was willing to hoist the flags of the various countries while their respective jumping teams "held" the grounds, but certain members of the Executive Council contended that this was not enough and demanded—

(1) That a Free State tricolour flag of larger size than any other displayed in the grounds should be flown from the Governor-General's box and

(2) That "The Soldiers' Song" should be played.

Failure to observe these conditions was to be fraught with serious consequences for the Society. The Free State military jumping team would not be allowed to participate, and the Executive Council would advise the appropriate authorities in other countries not to send teams to compete in the jumping competition.

The Society, realising how much the success of the Horse Show meant to Ireland, acquiesced in the Government's "request," and the tricolour flag has been flown and the "Soldiers' Song" played at the Horse Show ever since.

THE BANK OF IRELAND.

The Bank of Ireland, College Green, some years ago, on a certain important occasion, displayed the Union Jack without the company of the tricolour. It was intimated to the bank authorities by a member of the Executive Council that the Government was an important customer of the bank, and that, rightly or wrongly, the bank was in the popular mind strongly identified with the Administration.

I am told also that about the same period one or two military and police bands—not presumably on their own initiative—took pains, before they attended certain functions, to ascertain whether they were expected to provide musical honours for the toast of His Majesty.

A CURIOUS VIEW.

The installation of the present Governor-General in office marked a transference of the initiative in these matters to the King's representative directly, but in the exercise of it Mr. MacNeill, I am assured, has had throughout the most cordial approval of members of the Executive Council. The view of certain members of the Executive Council is the remarkable view that the very fact that he is the King's representative removes the Governor-General from the category of persons in whose honour "God Save the King" ought to be played.

His Majesty's Kingship, it is contended, is divided over many States, and, while "God Save the King" may be all right, say, at Geneva, where representatives of the various units of the Commonwealth are gathered together, it is entirely different when the individual State is concerned.

IF THE KING CAME TO DUBLIN.

"If the King came to the Free State in the morning," said a confidant of the Free State Cabinet to me yesterday, "he would be received with "The Solider's Song," but for, say, Lord Birkenhead, Mr. Baldwin, or Mr. Ramsay Macdonald, the British Anthem would be played, just as the American National Anthem was played for Mr. Kellogg when he came here.

"There is no reason why 'God Save the King' should be played for the Governor-General here. He is the head of this State, but the British National Anthem is not our Anthem, and there is no reason why it should be played for him.

"It should be remembered that the National Anthem of a country does not always have allusion to the head of the country, as witness the 'Star Spangled Banner,' the 'Marseillaise,' and others. Consequently, I cannot see where there is any slight to the head of this country when the country's National Anthem is played in his honour."

LEGISLATION POSSIBLE.

Continuing in this vein, my informant pointed out that proof of the fact that there is no intention to offer insult to His Majesty is that his toast is always honoured at formal dinner parties in the Viceregal Lodge. My informant dilated on the die-hard attitude adopted in certain quarters from the beginning to the use of the Free State flag and anthem.

In 1922 and 1923, I was given to understand, the Government contemplated the introduction of legislation requiring that, wherever the flag of another country was flown, a Free State tricolour flag, of equal or larger size, should also be flown.

It was, however, agreed eventually that it was desirable that the use of the flag should be established by popular consent rather than by legislation. It may be, my informant tells me, that a persistence of the mentality of Trinity College may yet necessitate legislation.

THE TRINITY VIEW.

The attitude of the Trinity Week Committee was explained to me yesterday by a member of the College who has been in close touch with recent events.

The Committee's objection, he told me, was not to the playing of the "Soldiers' Song," but to the omission of "God Save the King." Nobody pretends that Trinity College likes the "Soldiers' Song," but, as it is regarded as the Free State's anthem, the Committee would be prepared to have it played in deference to the wishes of the Saorstát Government, and I was informed that, if President Cosgrave or any of his Ministers should visit the College in a representative capacity, there would be no objecton to it.

The Governor-General, however, was not a Free State politician. He was the personal representative of the King in the Free State. When Mr. MacNeill's predecessor, Mr. T. M. Healy, visited the College Races, "God Save the King" was played for him, and no exception was taken to it, although in his time the personal status of the Governor-General had not been defined.

ILLOGICAL OBJECTION.

Mr. MacNeill's objection was as illogical as if the King himself were to object to his own anthem. My informant added that the Committee would have been quite prepared to play the "Soldiers' Song" in conjunction with "God Save the King"—a practice that is observed generally in other Dominions. When, for instance, the Earl of Athlone attends a function in South Africa, "God Save the King" is played for him, while the anthem of the Union also is played.

"Is it conceivable," asked my informant, "that the Earl of Athlone should object, or that Lord Willingdon should insist on the omission of 'God Save the King' at a function in Canada? Yet the Constitution of the Free State is identical with that of Canada, and Mr. McNeill is in precisely the same position as every other Governor-General in the Commonwealth."

BIG CROWD EXPECTED.

Discussing the College Races, I was told that more than one hundred and fifty badges had been sold in excess of last year's number, and that a large crowd was expected to-morrow in the College Park. The entries are greater than they have been on any previous occasion.

TEN MILLION POUNDS DERBY.

BIGGEST BETTING RACE EVER KNOWN.

The defeat of all the fancied candidates in the Derby last Wednesday, the subsequent failure of Atford in the Coronation Cup and several unexpected results at Kempton Park on Saturday were responsible for making Monday's "settling" a particularly unpleasant experience for many of the leading professional backers.

It has been estimated that this year's Derby has established a "record" as the biggest betting race in the history of racing in any country, and a conservative estimate is that nearly ten million pounds changed hands as the result of the success of the Irish colt Trigo last Wednesday.

Although Lord Astor's Pennycomequick helped backers and justified her favouritism by winning the Oaks, it was left to Kempton Park on Saturday to provide the retriever for the losses of backers—and the results went dead against them.

SATISFACTORY SETTLING DAY.

Mr. James Sutters, interviewed by a Press representative after the heavy "settling" at the Victoria Club, in London, yesterday afternoon, was well satisfied regarding the present healthy state of racing and betting in Great Britain. He said: "This year's Derby has certainly produced the biggest betting race since the war, and the amount to change hands, inclusive of sweepstakes, must be something between eight and ten million pounds.

"The sums of money wagered at the call-over on the eve of the Derby were extremely heavy. Immense public interest in the race, fostered by the big sweepstakes and the abolition of the bets tax, can be given as the cause of so much money being wagered, and as our trade is a barometer of the general public's financial position, I look upon this as a sign of increased prosperity.

"The settling to-day was a particularly heavy one, and was most satisfactory. All the big professional backers naturally met their obligations; for they practically never go outside their limit. Not only that, but the Derby is not a race which they would plunge on; for it is too open.

"The future betting market will not be affected by to-day's settling. It is exceedingly rare for a big backer to 'take the knock,' and it can be definitely stated that there are fewer defaulters among the legitimate backers than are to be found in the commercial trading community. This is the more remarkable because many deals of £500 and £1,000 are made merely on a telephonic conversation. If a backer fails to settle, he nearly always meets his obligations when he has got back into his stride."

WOMAN FOUND WOUNDED IN STREET.

MAN DIES IN HOSPITAL LATER.

Mrs. Oldham, of Willis street, Warrington, Lancashire, was discovered yesterday in the street in a residential suburb suffering from severe cuts on the head and face. James Wrench, aged forty-two, also of Willis street, was found later two miles away with throat wounds from which he died in hospital. Mrs. Oldham's condition is serious.

WOMAN CHARGED WITH MURDER.

In the Belfast Custody Court yesterday, Mary Humphries, aged 23, a married woman, of 13 Eureka street, Belfast, appeared on remand charged with the murder of her two year old son, Thomas Francis Humphries.

Professor William St. Clair Symmers said he conducted a post-mortem examination on the body of the child on June 1. He found a cut one inch long on the forehead, slightly to the right-hand side, underneath which there was an opening to the skull half an inch in diameter. In his opinion the cause of death was injury to the brain. The poker (produced) might have caused the injury. The case was adjourned for a week for further evidence.

ISLANDER'S POTEEN.

In the Grange District Court yesterday, before Justice Slattery, Patrick Heraghty, Innismurray Island, was fined £200, mitigated to £6, or three months' imprisonment, for being in possession of a gallon and a half of poteen.

At Thomastown (County Kilkenny) pig market yesterday, £4 12s. per cwt. was paid for fat pigs, a decrease of 4s. on last week's price, and of 8s. in a fortnight.

JESUIT RECTOR ON COMPULSION.

MINORITY'S VIEWS MUST NOT PREVAIL.

IRISH OF "ENORMOUS" VALUE.

The question of compulsory Irish figured largely in an address delivered by the Rev. John Coyne, S.J., Rector of Belvedere College, Dublin, at the annual distribution of prizes for the senior classes in the College last night. He devoted special attention to a leading article on the subject which appeared in the Irish Times yesterday morning.

Father Coyne said that he wished to disprove the views expressed in a leader in one of that morning's papers. It was his duty to speak of the matter before the parents, he declared, because very serious allegations had been made.

Three reasons were given for resisting compulsory Irish in the schools—(1) it was a denial of intellectual freedom; (2) it was the direct cause of material hardship to the taxpayer in the Free State, making good schooling an impossibility and handicapping clever boys with a subject useless outside the twenty-six counties; encouraging the exodus from the country; (3) the moral loss resulting from compulsory Irish was very great, discouraging, as it did, a large section of loyal citziens from co-operating in the national well-being of the country. "Is it wise," the writer asked, "for the sake of any ideal to nourish a perpetual dissatisfaction, an aching sense of injustice, in the bosom of the State?"

NOT A TYRANNY.

None of these reasons, said Father Coyne, could bear the searchlight of serious examination. It was not a denial of intellectual freedom. The country had made many sacrifices for its nationality in the past; it was not to throw away the opportunity of saving its language now that it had achieved a measure of self-government.

The language was not being foisted on the country by a political faction; the revival was the national policy of the people of this country. It was tyranny in the past to have snatched that language from their forefathers; it was not tyranny for the enlightened men of the nation to insist on giving it back to their children.

It had been made compulsory in the schools because that was the only sensible way of setting to work. It had an enormous educational value, not far behind that of the ancient classics, as expert Irish scholars testified. Its cultural value was very great, but the final argument was that it was, and would remain, the true language of this country.

NO FINANCIAL LOSS.

Further, it was no financial loss to insist on its study in the schools. It was not true to say that all else was being sacrificed to Irish. The subject was not useless outside the twenty-six counties, outside Ireland. Like every language, its study was a great gain to the mind. There in that big college there had been no complaint on the part of the parents; it did not interfere with other subjects. Every boy in the senior classes was doing three languages besides Irish; they were doing Latin and French and English, and a certain number, in addition, Greek, besides mathematics, science and drawing, history and geography.

Finally, it was not a great and incalculable moral loss that the language of the country should be restored. If it meant for a section of the community the choking-off of all inclination to co-operate with the national well-being of the country, all that could be said was that the loss of such co-operation was a negligible quantity. That section represented a minority that refused to accept nationality, and it was too much to expect that the views of such a section should prevail in the system of education of the country. There was no disgrace attaching to the knowledge of a language such as Irish. It was the great bulwark of their nationality, erected by Providence against the materialism of the age.

"A ROUNDED EDUCATION."

Father Coyne said that it was important that parents should not withdraw their boys too soon from school. Normally they should be left to the completion of their course—that is, the Leaving Certificate. The tendency was to curtail the time of boys at secondary schools; to rush them to a commerce school or apprentice them to a solicitor before their intellectual development was complete and their character formed.

What the Government wanted, what banks wanted, were not human machines for making entries or handing coin across the counter, but intelligent and trustworthy employés, with a rounded education and developed character, capable of reacting correctly to various emergencies: men of high principles of rectitude and honour. If schools and parents insisted on keeping boys to the full course, college testimonials would have their full value; there would be fewer applicants, but of higher quality, for Government appointments.

LAND STEWARD SUES COLONEL.

ACTION IN BELFAST.

In the Recorder's Court, Belfast, yesterday, David Graham sued Colonel H. A. Pakenham to recover £50 damages for alleged wrongful dismissal from the position of land steward. The plaintiff stated that he had been twenty-seven years in the service of the Pakenham family. He was originally engaged by the late General Pakenham. He entered into an agreement with Colonel Pakenham on the night of General Pakenham's funeral in 1913, and his wages were increased to £150; he also got a commission on profits.

The men under him were sometimes allowed to go back a week or two or more in pay until he had made sales. Colonel Pakenham, when speaking to him, said that he had heard reports that the men were not paid. Witness acknowledged it was his duty to see the men paid regularly. He knew of one of the men whose wife had been ill, and who had had expense. This man had not been paid for five or six weeks. The men were asked if they were paid up to date, and they answered in the affirmative. The reason given for his dismissal was holding money that he should have paid.

In cross-examination, witness said that the accounts sometimes showed a credit balance at the end of the month. He always got an advance of money from the agent when he asked for it. He recognised that it was undesirable, from Colonel Pakenham's point of view, that the men should not be paid regularly.

Colonel Pakenham stated that he did not know of the existence of any written agreement. The plaintiff came in another capacity and got promotion. The increases made in wages had been made by witness. He had put absolute confidence in the plaintiff. He had heard the rumour about irregular payment of wages, and he got into touch with the men. Several of them told him that they were not fully paid. He afterwards ordered that no one would be engaged or dismissed except by himself. He dismissed Graham because of the way in which the Pakenham name was blackened.

Mr. J. Bristow, agent, also gave evidence, and stated that, except on one occasion, the monthly accounts showed a credit balance for a period before the dismissal. Had the plaintiff wanted money he could have got it.

The case was dismissed.

EX-SOLDIER DISCHARGED.

A young unemployed ex-soldier named Robert James Lyttle, who pleaded guilty at Derry City Crown Sessions to the attempted larceny of a packet of chewing gum from an automatic slot machine, was discharged on entering into recognisances of £5 to keep the peace for one year.

GIRL CYCLIST'S FATAL INJURIES

"That death was due to septic meningitis and cardiac failure, and that no blame could be attached to anyone," was the verdict returned by a coroner's jury at Nenagh yesterday, when an inquest was held on Margaret Ryan (26), of Borrisoleigh, farmer's daughter, who died from injuries received when she collided with another cyclist named George Mooney, of Templederry, on May 30 last. Mr. Mooney stated that owing to the dust caused by a passing motor he was unable to see the deceased girl coming down the hill.

NORTHERN PARLIAMENT.

UNEMPLOYMENT.

DEBATE ON HOUSING.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

BELFAST, Monday.

In the Northern Parliament to-day, the Minister of Labour (the Right Hon. J. M. Andrews) submitted the estimates for his department. The total amount was £159,259. He said that the Ministry was submitted to two criticisms—one, that its administration was too lenient, and the other that it was not sympathetic. The Ministry had to balance between these two views. Neither expression of opinion worried him very much, so long as he felt that the department was faithfully carrying out the provisions of the various Unemployment Acts as sympathetically as could be done within their four walls. The Ministry used every effort to get useful employment for their people, and at the same time to come to the rescue of those who were passing through a period of adversity, whether due to unemployment, sickness, bereavement or old age. Northern Ireland had been almost free from industrial troubles in the past eight years.

No matter how faithfully the Department discharged its duty in this respect, always bearing in mind the policy that prevention is better than cure, still at times trouble would occur no matter how much care was taken. "I deeply regret," he said, "in this connection that in one of the trades of our shipbuilding industry trouble has occurred between the joiners and their employers. It is not for me to express an opinion one way or the other. It is my duty to remain absolutely neutral; but I take advantage of this opportunity earnestly to express the hope that before long peace will again be secured, because, if not, I am absolutely satisfied that many in other trades in connection with our great shipbuilding industry will suffer, as well as their wives and families, and irreparable damage might be done to the industry itself, if this strike is unduly prolonged.

AGRICULTURAL TRAINING.

Referring to the Richhill Training Centre for training young men in agricultural practice for the Dominions, he said that the Department was not forcing anyone to leave the country, but was giving all an opportunity of preparing themselves for work in other parts of the Empire if they desired to go to the Dominions. Many of these young men, when they got to Canada and Australia, wrote thanking the Government for giving them an opportunty to get to a new country to earn a livelihood, instead of hanging about the streets here doing nothing.

At present there were 95 men in training at Richhill, and another group was anxiously waiting to get there.

With regard to unemployment, he was thankful to be able to say that the position had greatly improved, and anyone who said that it had not was not speaking in accordance with facts. In August last 47,240 of their people were unemployed, and the total was now 34,555, showing a decrease of 13,000. The percentage of unemployment last year was 18.1. This year the figures in the estimate were based upon a percentage of 16, and, he said, I have no hesitation in saying that that is a conservative estimate, for at the moment the actual percentage of unemployment is 14.7.

Apart from the strike, to which he had already referred, the prospect of the shipbuilding and engineering industry was much better than it has been for a considerable time.

I take a sanguine view regarding the linen trade as a whole, he said. It is true that some of our spinning mills are not fully employed, and some may not be fully employed for a very considerable time; but that is only one branch of the linen trade. What is of the utmost importance is that our weaving factories are employing at the present time considerably more persons than they have done for a number of years. Not a single damask weaver available for work is unemployed at the present time, and there are only forty unemployed plain weavers. Those who say that the linen trade is dying, or almost dead, in my opinion, are doing irreparable harm.

Proceeding, he said that the staple trade of Derry—the shirt and collar trade—was also in a satisfactory position.

Mr. J. Beattie (Labour, Pottinger) said that he should have liked to have heard from the Minister what was to be the future of the unemployed of Ulster. Their industries in the future were not going to be able to absorb all those seeking employment. If the Government's solution for unemployment was the Richhill Training Centre, then they should resign and let someone else deal with the problem.

The Minister said that there were 34,000 unemployed upon the Unemployment Register, but that did not represent the total number of unemployed in Northern Ireland, and the figure should be 44,000 or 45,000 if they took into account the hundreds turned off the register every week. It was bad policy to send young people out to the Dominions. He preferred a system of family settlement. He advocated old age pensions at sixty, or increased pensions, and prohibiting the entry of young persons into industry until they reach fifteen years of age, with a grant for maintenance allowances.

Major M'Cormick (Unionist, St. Anne's) said that the Ministry of Labour was appreciated by the people to a greater extent than any other department of the Government. He hoped that the Ministry would withdraw the phrase "not genuinely seeking work" when dealing with applicants for unemployment benefit, and would substitute some other phrase, such as "you have failed to prove that you are genuinely seeking work."

Mr. Cahir Healy (Nationalist, South Fermanagh) said that he hoped that the new Minister of Labour in England, when she came to adjust matters between Northern Ireland and Great Britain, would be perfectly sympathetic. (Hear, hear from the Government benches.) He suggested that one capable man in charge of the whole department would tend to more efficient and cheaper administration.

Criticising the Government's policy regarding Richhill, he said that it would be better for the Government to train farmers sons for work at home, instead of training them for export.

The Rev. Professor Corkey, Unionist, Queen's University, in a maiden speech, paid a tribute to the courteous manner in which officials of the Ministry met those who had reason to interview them.

The debate was adjourned until-to-morrow.

In the Northern Senate the Bankruptcy (Amendment) Bill, which had already had a second reading, passed through the remaining stages. Several minor amendments were accepted.

BROKEN ROMANCE IN BELFAST.

In the Belfast Summons Court yesterday, Thomas Nuttall summoned Rosina Peed for assault on the 25th May, while the latter had a cross-summons for abusive and threatening language on the same date.

The complainant stated that he had kept company with Miss Peed for 3½ years, but broke off the friendship in March last. He met her by accident on the 25th May, and walked with her a distance of about twenty yards, chatting. On coming opposite a policeman she used very abusive language to witness, then struck him twice, and tried to give him in charge. On another occasion he was seriously beaten about the face, at her instigation, by a number of men.

On both parties giving an undertaking to ignore each other in future and to walk on the opposite side of the street if they happened to meet, Mr. P. J. O'Donoghue, R.M., adjourned the case for six months.

DERRY WOUNDING CASE.

A middle-aged man named Thomas Green pleaded guilty, before the Derry Recorder yesterday, to wounding his brother, Peter Green, in April last.

The latter, in evidence, said that the prisoner was drinking heavily at the time, and did not know what he was doing. He had always been a good brother.

Judge Osborne, K.C., allowed prisoner out on his own recognisance of £5 to come up for judgment if called upon within a year.

At the sitting of Strabane Petty Sessions Court yesterday, Doctor William Stevenson, Messrs. Harold Britton, and John Perry, of Strabane, were sworn in as magistrates.

CORRESPONDED FOR EIGHTEEN YEARS.

COUNTY CORK BREACH OF PROMISE ACTION.

DEFENDANT A LONDON PORT OFFICIAL.

An Irishwoman, who complained of the shattering of a romance, which began, she said, more than twenty years ago, was the plaintiff in an action heard by Mr. Justice Horridge and a common jury in the King's Bench Division, London, yesterday. She was Miss Joan Gould, of Canovee, Killinardrish, County Cork, and she claimed damages for alleged breach of promise of marriage against Mr. John O'Sullivan, an employe of the Port of London Authority, of Voltaire road, Clapham, London. Mr. O'Sullivan, in the defence which he entered to the action, denied that there was any promise of marriage.

Mr. Jardine, K.C., for Miss Gould, said that she was the daughter of a Canovee farmer, and the defendant formerly lived at that place. She knew him by sight when he was a boy at school, but it was not until 1903 that she got upon speaking terms with him. In 1905, shortly after the death of her father, she received a proposal of marriage from Mr. O'Sullivan. She accepted him, but in view of her bereavement, it was agreed that the wedding should be put off for some time. At that time Mr. O'Sullivan's position with the Port of London Authority was a subordinate one, but in the course of years he rose in the service, until by 1923 he had become a manager. From 1905 onwards for a considerable period Mr. O'Sullivan made a habit of going year by year to Canovee for his holidays. On these occasions he was always accepted as Miss Gould's fiancee, and he conducted himself as her lover. Marriage was talked of from time to time, but the defendant kept putting it off. There were great difficulties, he said, about finding a home in London. In 1911, apparently, he was not very pleased because some other man accompanied the plaintiff and himself on a drive. When they returned to Canovee he said to her—"Look here, the sooner we are married the better." He added that he did not like the other man "hanging about." Miss Gould said that she would marry him the next day if he wished, but Mr. O'Sullivan did not close with the offer. In the years that followed he kept on deferring the marriage, although it was sometimes discussed.

LONG CORRESPONDENCE.

For some eighteen years a voluminous and affectionate correspondence was carried on between the parties. During the war period Miss Gould's family regularly sent parcels containing salmon, poultry, and other luxuries to the defendant. In the summer of 1919, while Mr. O'Sullivan was on holiday, he was tackled by Miss Gould's brother, and he then declared that he fully intended that the wedding should take place later on. It would have been celebrated a long while before, he said, but for the trouble about getting accommodation in London. During his holiday in 1923 the defendant was on very affectionate terms with Miss Gould and spoke of getting a house, but when he left Ireland he did not say "Good-bye." Then some weeks later—in October, 1923—he wrote a most extraordinary letter from London to the plaintiff. In the course of this epistle there occurred the following passage:—

"No, old dear. I passed my fiftieth year two days ago, and as I have gone so long unscathed I am going to take pot luck for the remainder of the time. Once again, Miss, No, never more."

These words, counsel suggested, showed a desire on the part of the defendant to put an end to the engagement. Later news was received in Ireland that Mr. O'Sullivan had married some woman in England in February, 1924. Miss Gould, Mr. Jardine added, was now more than fifty years of age. The best years of her life were past, and he submitted that in the circumstances she was entitled to ask for substantial compensation.

PLAINTIFF'S EVIDENCE.

Miss Gould, giving evidence, said that after the engagement Mr. O'Sullivan treated her affectionately, and on his visits to Ireland he always kissed her when they met.

Mr. Justice Horridge—Did he give you the squeezes he speaks of in his letters?

Miss Gould—Yes. (Laughter.)

Cross-examined by Serjeant Sullivan, for the defendant, Miss Gould denied that she had ever authorised anyone to say on her behalf that if she had been married she would have had a fortune of about a thousand pounds.

The witness spoke in a rich brogue, and the Judge remarked that he was having some difficulty in understanding her evidence.

Serjeant Sullivan—I am afraid, my lord, that a great deal of the case will be Greek to you until you understand the Irish technicalities.

The Judge—But Greek, you know, is a classical language. (Laughter.)

Answering Serjeant Sullivan, Miss Gould said that she had never been present at an Irish match-making.

Serjeant Sullivan—Your case is that you and the defendant fell in love.

Miss Gould—Yes.

Mr. Justice Horridge (to counsel)—Your suggestion is that in other cases it is always business. (Laughter.)

Serjeant Sullivan—In most cases in these districts marriages are arranged by the parents, and not by the young people at all. They meet for the first time at the altar.

Serjeant Sullivan asked Miss Gould if she could point to any passage in the correspondence where Mr. O'Sullivan alluded to approaching marriage or spoke of fixing a date for it.

Mr. Justice Horridge—If she has got to go through all these letters we shall be here until Christmas. (Laughter.)

The hearing was adjourned.

STRIKE AT AIRSHIP STATION.

MEN DECIDE TO REMAIN OUT.

The engineers, about thirty in number, on strike at Howden Airship Station, East Yorkshire, held a meeting last night, and decided to remain out. Officials at the Airship Station, they state, have refused to meet the District Committee of the T.A.E.U.

It is denied that the whole of the work on the airship R 100 has been brought to a standstill.

TIMBER YARD FIRE.

RAILWAY SERVICE INTERRUPTED.

Owing to an outbreak of fire in a timber yard adjoining Bank Hall Railway Station, Liverpool, yesterday, the electric railway service was partially disorganised.

Concrete flags shot into the air with terrific explosions, and during the rush hours many trains were delayed. The firemen were fighting the flames for over twelve hours.

MULLINGAR FAIR.

A small show of fat pigs. Stores dull. Good demand for porkers. Bacon pigs averaged 80s. to 90s. per cwt., dead-weight. Stores £3 to £5 each. Bonhams 25s. to 35s.

The cattle fair yesterday was very small. There was a good show of lambs, and a fair supply of fat sheep. There was a very large show of milch cows, both down and in calf, but the quality generally was very poor. Demand very slow. For the time of the year there was a good show of beef, but prices were disappointing to sellers on account of the high prices paid for stores in the early spring. Quotations—Three - year - old heifers and bullocks, £18 to £22; two-year-olds, £13 to £16; yearlings, £7 to £10. Fat sheep—Hoggets, 55s. to £3 5s. each; ewes, £3 to £4.

The lamb fair was virtually cleared out at prices ranging from 44s. to 50s. each, and in a few instances as high as 54s. and 55s. was reached. Beef, 46s. to 50s. per cwt.; mutton, 10d. to 1s. per lb.

PIGS DOWN AT LOUGHREA.

At Loughrea market bacon pigs were purchased at 63s. per cwt. live weight, which showed a drop of 5s. on previous market price.

The death is announced in Melbourne of Mr. Edward Morley, a member of the Victorian Legislative Assembly.

GERMAN LOAN SURPRISE.

SMALL DEMAND BY INVESTORS.

BERLIN, Monday.

The precarious cash position of the Government is unpleasantly emphasised to-day by the announcement of the rough sum obtained by the tax-exempt Reich Loan. The Loan, in spite of the unusual advantages offered and the prolongation of the period of subscription by another week—in order that advantage might be taken of the effect of the Paris settlement on the investing public—has been a distinct failure.

The Finance Minister obtained authorisation for the issue of 500,000,000 marks (£25,000,000). He chose, for the time being, to be content with only 300,000,000 marks (£15,000,000), keeping the rest in reserve, unless the demand should be so great as to make it worth while to exceed that sum. He has not even obtained his 300,000,000 marks. The provisional estimate of the subscriptions is 177,700,000 marks (£8,880,000).

WEST END FIRE THRILLS.

GIRLS CRAWL ALONG PARAPET.

There were thrilling scenes in the West End of London last night when a fire broke out in the business premises in Wells street, Oxford street.

A number of girls who were working in a millinery establishment on the second floor were unable to escape by the stairs. Without hesitation they climbed on to a narrow parapet, and, crawling on hands and knees, managed to scramble on to the roof of the next house and drop through a skylight.

A man jumped into the blanket held by firemen.

RAILWAY CONNECTION WITH THE DOCKS.

At the meeting of the Limerick Harbour Commissioners yesterday, the Mayor presiding, a report was read from the special committee relative to the question of railway connection with the docks. The committee met on June 5th, and recommended the construction of a line of railway connecting the dock with the Great Southern Railway, via Mallow street. The cost was estimated at from £18,000 to £19,000.

In a discussion it was stated that the borrowing powers of the Harbour Commissioners was £200,000, and the board had £51,000 to credit.

On the motion of Mr. Tracy, seconded by Mr. Holliday, the Committee's recommendation was adopted, subject to approval by the Free State Ministry of Industry, a deputation being appointed to wait on the Ministry.

Mr. Ryan said that they would have to place before the Ministry the economic possibilities of the proposed railway as to its tonnage.

Mr. Loughrey said that they estimated the tonnage at 70,000 tons at 1s. 6d. per ton.

SLIGO BREACH OF PROMISE ACTION.

SCENE IN COURT.

In the Sligo Circuit Court yesterday, Agnes Marlowe, of Rathlee, County Sligo, sued Patrick Gilhool for £300 damages for breach of promise and £100 for seduction.

Plaintiff's case having concluded, the defendant, when about to be examined, began muttering in the witness-box: "They are going to hang me; they are going to hang me," and when asked did he know Agnes Marlowe, jumped out of the witness-box and rushed out of the court. He was seized by four Civic Guards, who had great difficulty in holding him.

Judge Wakely said that he did not think that the defendant was responsible for his actions and adjourned the case.

Gilhool was taken to the barrack and detained for a couple of hours. He then was released in the custody of friends.

OPENING OF TOURIST SEASON.

ASSOCIATION'S PLANS TO IMPROVE HOTELS.

The 1929 tourist season has had a "record" opening, and enquiries from Great Britain and from all parts of Ireland, stimulated by an extensive Press campaign, show substantial increases on the figures of previous years, the only drop being for the few days of the General Election in Great Britain, when apparently political interests created a temporary lull in holiday enthusiasm.

Following a visit by representatives of the Fox Movietone News, not only Irish scenery but the Irish accent, or, rather, a collection of accents from various parts of the country, will soon be produced through cinemas in Europe and America.

Large parties of visitors from other countries are coming for the Catholic Emancipation Centenary Celebrations, and there is every reason to expect similar, or even greater invasions for the International Motor Race in July. This latter event, in the opinion of the Association, should prove one of the biggest individual sources of revenue that the country has experienced, and the Royal Dublin Society's premier fixture in August also is expected to eclipse previous "records."

The Association is taking steps to place before the Technical Congress at Sligo a scheme for the training of additional hotel staffs, and proposals are being considered for submission to the Government with the object of providing special legislation conducive to the improvement of the hotel industry generally.

MOTOR CAR AND CYCLE IN COLLISION.

ACCIDENT ON THE TRAMORE ROAD.

A motor car and motor cycle came into collision on the Tramore road last Sunday night about 9 o'clock. Mr. Sean Burke, cycle dealer and repairer, of George's street, Wexford, was proceeding with a passenger to Tramore in his motor car. As he approached Sheep's Bridge two motor cyclists were observed approaching. How the accident occurred is not quite clear; but the leading cyclist, Mr. McSherry, Sligo, and Mr. Burke's car collided. The motor cycle became embedded in the front of the car, and Mr. McSherry was flung underneath the car. When picked up it was found that one of his legs was fractured, and that he had sustained severe facial injuries, as well as concussion. He was conveyed to the infirmary and detained.

TRAIN OFF THE LINES.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

BOGOTA, Monday.

Four persons were killed and twenty-five were injured in a railway accident at Javier yesterday evening. It is stated that the engine ran off the rails owing to excessive speed.

Notwithstanding protests from the butchers, the Plymouth Corporation has decided to close the abattoir in Glanville street on December 31.

The death from pneumonia, at Pittsburg, is announced, at the age of 86, of Mrs. Mary Opley Thaw, the widowed mother of Harry K. Thaw.

STOCKS CLOSE HEAVY.

REUTER'S TELEGRAMS.

NEW YORK, Monday.

Stocks opened irregular, and highly erratic movements characterised the market. Call money was renewed at 7 p.c., and afterwards advanced to 8 p.c. Expectations of stiffer money rates around the middle of the month had a deterrent effect on speculation for the advance, while short selling also were restricted by the fact that a large short interest already had been built up in several speculative issues. Oils tended to advance on first reports from the Colorado Springs Conservation Conference, but organised buying was limited to relatively unimportant issues. Wide fluctuations occurred among some high-priced utilities. Commonwealth Power touched 175¼, then rebounded to 208, but closed at 198, while American Waterworks declined to 121, and rebounded to 126 before again falling off. In the late trading, selling drove some issues down to new low levels for the year, with pressure pronounced in many important industrial groups. Woolworth, Western Union Telegraph, Auburn Motors, Marmon Motors, Packard Motor, Bendix Aviation, Curtiss Aero, and American Locomotive were among the declines of 3 to 5 points. The close was heavy. Government Bonds dull. Railroad Bonds irregular. The day's sales amounted to 2,197,000 shares.

Money on call closed firm at 8 p.c. bid and 8¼ p.c. asked. Business done during the day ranged from 7 to 8 p.c., with 7 p.c. the ruling rate. The last loan was made at 8 p.c. Sterling exchange steady. Silver ⅛c. higher at 52⅝.

WINNIPEG GRAINS.

WHEAT opened steady, but ⅛c. to ¼c. down. Beneficial showers over the week-end, coupled with a forecast for further moisture, influenced early declines, and values continued to weaken on a favourable private crop report from Southern Europe. Advices of beneficial showers over parts of Argentina, together with bearish acreage reports from France, were further bearish factors. The market closed weak at 3⅛c. to 3¼c. loss. NEW YORK COTTON.

COTTON at the opening was barely steady, and 6 to 12 points down. Lower cable advices and more favourable weather reports caused local and Southern selling, but the decline attracted trade buying. There also was some buying of July against sales of later deliveries. Later Wall Street selling brought recessions, the market closing steady, with old contracts 14 to 15 and Southern contracts 14 to 16 points down. Spot quiet at 15 points decline. Messrs. Proctor and Gamble estimate the area planted to cotton at 48,820,000 acres, an increase of 4 per cent. At New Orleans futures opened 9 to 15 points lower; At 11.45 July further declined to 18.61, but October advanced to 18.58, while December was quoted 18.70, January 18.74, and March 18.87. Around 1.45 July fell back to 18.53, October to 18.49, and December to 18.62; and at the close values were 22 to 16 points down. Spot declined 18 points.

CHICAGO MARKETS.

CHICAGO, Monday.

WHEAT opened easy, ⅛c. to ⅝c. lower, owing to excellent weather in the South-West and selling by Winnipeg houses. A private report stating that the crop condition is fine in Minnesota and North Dakota, together with private estimates indicating that the Nebraska crop will exceed average and fears that trouble will be encountered in the passage of the Farm Relief Bill through the Senate, caused further sharp recessions. The close was weak at 3¾c. to 3½c. decline.

DRIVERLESS TRAM IN CROWDED STREET.

WOMAN LEAPS OFF.

A woman passenger leaped from a driverless tram as it went at full speed through a crowded street in Leeds.

A few seconds earlier the tram had nearly been in collision with a motor cycle combination in Wellington street. Two hundred yards further on the driver collapsed and rolled from the driving platform into the road.

When the passengers realised that the tram was uncontrolled, Mrs. Doris Kirkwood, of Hope avenue, Armley, jumped off. The car travelled another hundred and fifty yards before the conductor could reach the driving platform and bring it to a stop.

The driver, Thomas Eccleshill, who had fallen clear, was picked up unconscious, and he and Mrs. Kirkwood were taken to the infirmary. After treatment Mrs. Kirkwood was allowed to go home, but Eccleshill was detained.

VESTRIS DISASTER.

CLAIMS FOR LOSS OF LIFE AND CARGO.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

NEW YORK, Monday.

If all the law suits filed and pending against the Lamport and Holt Line, owners of the ill-fated Vestris, are settled for only half the amount of the sums claimed, the disaster will still be the most costly on "record."

Six hundred suits have already been filed by insurance companies, who claim £300,000 for the loss of the cargo. Lawyers estimate that an additional £220,000 in claims for loss of life and injury are pending.

If it is proved by the Board of Trade investigation that the Vestris was unseaworthy with the knowledge of the owners, there is no limit to their liability under the American law.

If responsibility for the sinking is not laid at the door of the owners, however, their financial liability is limited to the amount of passage and freight money received—about £12,000.

BANKRUPT CHICAGO.

COLLECTING 1928 TAXES IN 1930.

FROM OUR OWN CORRESPONDENT.

CHICAGO, Monday.

While Mayor Thompson, of Chicago, was busily fulminating against the British Empire and allowing taxpayers' money to be wasted by his corrupt Administration, Chicago's Governmental machine became so lax that the collection of taxes actually stopped.

A Citizens' Advisory Commission was chosen yesterday to devise means for saving Chicago and Cook County—which corresponds to the City of London—from the bankruptcy, for which they are headed, due to delay in collecting the 1928 taxes.

The Commission has twenty-seven business men, who were named at a conference between representatives of the County Board, the City Council, and heads of the county and city efficiency departments.

It is pointed out that the 1928 taxes will not be collected until the summer of 1930.

ROMAN GALLEYS OF LAKE NEMI.

MORE FINDS.

FROM REUTER'S CORRESPONDENT.

ROME, Monday.

The two Roman galleys, which have lain submerged in Lake Nemi since the days when they were the magnificently decorated houseboats of the Roman emperors, were thrown open to-day for inspection by a party of journalists.

The galley lying nearer the shore now has thirty yards of her length above water. The visitors inspected the exposed parts of the galley, and also a collection of objects recovered recently in the course of the work.

Among them were a number of pieces of copper used for roofing part of the galleys. There were also large blocks of cement and pieces of earthenware pipes, evidently forming part of a water or sanitary installation on board the galley. It is expected that the nearer galley will be high and dry by October.

ALWAYS FRESH and VIGOROUS and Looking at One's Best rallies Flagging Energies

Miss Gillian Lind, the beautiful and accomplished young actress appearing in "Why Drag In Marriage?" at the Strand Theatre London, writes:—

"I MUST emphasise how thoroughly Phosferine keeps one always fresh and vigorous, looking and working at one's best. When playing a rather tiring comedy part, there is such a tax on the nerves in endeavouring to gain just the right effects that you may be sure I am very glad of the wonderful assistance Phosferine gives in keeping up my health and spirits, so that I feel able always to play at the top of my form. Phosferine is by far the best means of rallying one's flagging energies and maintaining youthful sparkle, as even if I should be a trifle jaded or depressed before the Show commences, I find a little Phosferine soon puts me quite all right, and I go through the performance satisfactorily and without strain. When I think of the many disabilities Phosferine saves me from, I cannot praise it too highly."

ROYAL IRISH ACADEMY.

IMPORTANT CONTRIBUTIONS.

At the meeting of the Royal Irish Academy, held yesterday in Academy House, Dawson street, Dublin, Dr. R. Lloyd Praeger read a paper on: "The Semperviva of the Canary Islands Area, with special reference to Hybrids." The paper dealt with the results of four months' work on the Canary Islands in 1927. Special attention was paid to the numerous hybrids that occur between the species growing there, which have occasioned a good deal of confusion.

A second paper contributed by Dr. Praeger was a "Report from the Fauna and Flora Committee on the recent additions to Fauna and Flora of Ireland." The paper summarised recent advances in the knowledge of a large number of Irish animal and plant groups, and adds some hundreds of species to the list of those previously known as inhabiting this country.

Professor J. K. Charlesworth read a paper on: "The Glacial Retreat in Iar Connaught."

DYE BASIS.

Mr. J. J. Drumm, Mr. R. J. P. Carolan and Mr. Hugh Ryan presented a paper on: "The Constitution of Iso-Catechin Tetramethyl Ether." It represented the completion of the investigation of the problem of the constitution of catechin, a body of great importance in the naturally occurring dyes and pigments in plaits. The first part of the work was begun by Mr. Drumm and Mr. Ryan in 1923 in University College, Dublin. They were the first to prepare oxonium dyes from catechin of a class closely related to anthocyanidin pigments in flowers. The work represents the final stage of working out the constitution of the new oxonium dye bases derived from catechin, and hence of catechin itself.

It will have been guessed by most readers of the report of the proceedings at St. Columba's College that the Warden, when advocating increased ordination of schoolmasters, did not say that "social life would be as good a training for junior clergy as many curacies" (as printed)—but "school life."

MODERATE RACING.

SATURN BEATEN ON THE POST.

GOOD WIN OF MOYRESQUE.

FROM OUR TRAVELLING CORRESPONDENT.

LEWES, Monday.

People come to this old-fashioned meeting more with the idea of a holiday than of seeing good-class racing, and it must be said of it that when the sun is shining it is a very pleasant place. On the other hand, when there is a sea mist hanging over the Downs, nothing could be more uncomfortable.

The memory went back, after the success of Ann Bridget in the Abergavenny Plate, to the successful days of the Druid's Lodge stable; for the owner of the daughter of Bridge of Earn is Mr. E. A. Wigan, who had a number of horses there. He only races on a very limited scale now, and Frank Hartigan trains this winner for him.

She is evidently useful, for she drew up to the leader, Hilltoi, at the distance, and heading her close home beat her cleverly by half a length. Possibly she had a good bit in hand.

Then came a success for the Marchioness Curzon, whose Dusky Bride in the Juvenile Selling Plate got up in the last few strides to win in a good finish by a head from Glenarch. Lady Curzon is a real enthusiast, and is as pleased when she wins a selling hurdle race as when she wins a good-class handicap. After the race she let Dusky Bride go to Mr. W. Armstrong for 290 guineas.

Races for amateurs are a feature of the Lewes Meeting, and in the Southdown Open Welter we had a thrilling set-to between Mr. A. Cottrill on Joyous Greeting and Mr. C. P. Kirk on Saturn. The former made the running, but Saturn headed him twenty yards or so from the post. Then Joyous Greeting came again in the last stride or two and beat the odds-on chance by a head. Captain Weber finished third here on the old Great Metropolitan winner, Kyra, but Major Torr, who rode Garryhecken complained of interference on the part of Kyra, who was disqualified, while the Stewards said a few words to Captain Weber.

The Manton stable sent the Galloper Light colt, Moyresque, owned by Mr. W. M. Cazalet, and Gay Guy, owned by Mr. Michel Calmann, to run for the three-year-old handicap. The former was preferred in the market, but Emigree and Hegemony were better favourites than either. The Manton pair had the finish to themselves, Moyresque beating Gay Guy by a length and a half. The winner was never headed after taking the lead from Hegemony.

Lieutenant-Colonel Carruthers' Michaelmas Day, a son of Tetratema, whom he acquired at the late Mr. Gilpin's sale, is not a sound horse, but in the Beacon Selling Plate he stayed on too well for old Yellow Underwing and beat him by half a length; and the distance was a mile and a half, too.

After The Blower had beaten Bewiser in the Apprentices' Plate by a neck there was an objection, but it was quickly overruled.

FANCIES FOR TWO MEETINGS.

Entries are large for the modest prizes offered here to-morrow, the most valuable event, the Lewes Spring Handicap, being worth only £200. The going is good here, so a fine chance has to be given to Brigliadoro. Cincinnatus has a chance, and Final Wink is not out of it, but I select BRIGLIADORO to win.

There is an enormous entry for the Landport Maiden Plate, in which I take the SCARLET GLOW FILLY as the most likely one. TUTBURY should win the Members' Handicap.

Birmingham's prizes are more valuable, and the Midland Breeders' Foal Plate there is worth £1,000. The best chance in that race is given to PROHIBITION, who will be receiving a lot of weight from most of the others.

The Guernsey Stud Produce Stakes may be won by WOODCHUCK and the Bull Ring Plate by BLACK MINSTREL.

THURLES.

FIVE FAVOURITES WIN.

ANOTHER DOUBLE FOR J. DAWSON.

Backers of favourites had a very successful time at Thurles yesterday, the best fancied candidate in every race winning with regularity until the last event, when Lare, an odds-on chance, was beaten by Cheerio II. It was the second meeting of the season on the course, and big as was the crowd on the first occasion, the attendance yesterday was far larger.

J. Dawson, who has carried on the Rathbride Manor stable since the death of his father, the late Michael Dawson, took some time to settle down to the big task of running such an establishment, but this season has been turning out winners regularly every week, and bids fair to follow in the footsteps of one of the most competent and most respected of our Irish trainers.

He brought three horses to yesterday's meeting, and captured races with two of them, namely—Cornafulla and Sea Fisher. The former had rather weak opposition in the Committee Steeplechase, but he is not too reliable a customer, and though he won with a good bit in hand, his rider, J. Lynn, junior, could not take any liberties, and had to drive along as hard as he could to stall off the challenge of Mountain View. Dawson's other winner, Sea Fisher, had an easier task in the June Plate, and after Keeper Hill ran out at the second fence he was never headed. Keeper Hill also ran in the three miles' steeplechase, and got a bad fall, and it subsequently transpired that he broke his leg, which was particularly bad luck on his owner, Mr. J. L. Dobbs, who, it appears, had not the horse insured. The race was won by Cheerio II., who during the winter won many point-to-point races in the South of Ireland.

Although only Flying Essex and Dreamy Knight turned out for the Ladies' Plate, there was a capital race between the pair, and Flying Essex enhanced her reputation by winning cleverly by half a length. In a field of thirteen runners for the Corinthian Plate Gold Chaser dominated the situation all through. He was ridden in capable style by Mr. E. Kennedy, whose first success it was in a flat race. Atlantic Flier made amends for the somewhat unlucky defeat by Orbell at Mullingar by winning the Thurles Plate in easy style. Details:—

TRINITY WEEK.

THE SWIMMING GALA.

The Trinity Week Swimming Gala, which will be held in the Iveagh Baths this evening, commencing at 7.30, is the first aquatic fixture of importance in Leinster each year. The programme includes the 100 Yards College Championship, and as Messrs. T. H. Dockrell, D. W. B. Good, A. T. Ryland and O. S. Wallace have qualified for the final it should produce a closely contested finish. Both heats were won in the same time.

An invitation squadron race, for which all the leading Dublin clubs have entered teams, and two water polo matches—the senior match D.U.S.C. v. Dublin S.C., and the junior match D.U.S.C. v. Sandycove S.C.—will conclude the programme.

The hon. secretaries request competitors to be in time, for the success of the gala will depend on the elimination of delays between the events. An orchestra will attend.

CYCLING.

LORAINE CLUB'S TOUR.

This excursion from Dublin to Maryborough and back was held on Sunday under fairly favourable conditions, the only drawback being a solid wind from the West, which curtailed the going on the outward journey. Out of the 162 cyclists who entered, 150 started and 140 (including 17 ladies) completed the distance in less than the twelve hours required, and qualified for the club's certificate. The ladies were:—The Misses B. J. Benton, M. Benton, S. Benton, F. Bligh, G. Brusey, J. Gosling, F. Gregory, W. Hunter, R. Kiernan, H. Kleinstuber, E. A. Lane, E. McKay, F. Moore, H. Shaw, D. Shaw, K. Garner and E. Smith.

A tour of 100 miles in ten hours is to be held on 7th July.

MOTOR CYCLING.

THE JUNIOR TOURIST RACE.

HIGH SPEEDS IN THE ISLE OF MAN.

A FATAL ACCIDENT.

The Junior Tourist Race, for machines with engines not exceeding 350 cubic centimetres, with which the Isle of Man week commenced yesterday, was won by F. G. Hicks, of Birmingham, on a Velocette. Hicks is better known by reason of his performances at Brooklands, where he has established himself as a leading exponent of the 350 class of machine, than by his performances on the road. It was his second appearance in the Isle of Man, he having finished fifth in the same race of last year.

He broke all records for the Isle of Man by covering the 264 miles, made up of seven circuits of the mountainous course round the island, at a speed of 69.71 miles per hour.

W. L. Handley riding an A.J.S., was second, being beaten by one minute twenty-two seconds, and Alec Bennett, the holder of the trophy, was third, less than a minute behind the second man.

The outstanding feature was the remarkably high speeds attained. Three times during the race the lap record for junior machines was beaten. In his third lap Jimmy Simpson, who led on the first circuit and then fell back with trouble with his brakes, did 70.8 miles an hour on his Norton, only to retire after doing four laps with engine trouble. Handley, on his fifth lap, attained a speed of 70.8, and the ultimate winner covered the circuit of 37½ miles in 31 minutes 55 seconds, a speed just under 71 miles an hour, which is within one second of the senior lap record made by Stanley Woods in the race of 1927.

Next to the speeds attained, the feature was the manner in which the cracks singled themselves out from the ruck in the early stages and remained at the head of affairs to the finish. After the first lap the race lay between Hicks, Bennett and Handley, and except that Handley passed Bennett on the third lap to run into second place there was no change in the positions of the first three men from the end of the third lap to the end of the race. Indeed, for the last four of seven laps there was no change in the position of the first six riders.

Nevertheless, the race never became a procession, for between the leaders the margin of time was so small that until the race ended the issue was in doubt.

Of the forty-four entrants there was only one non-starter, Guthrie, the Scottish crack, not having recovered from the injury received in practice.

It was in accordance with precedent to find the meteoric rider, Simpson, taking the lead on the first lap. From a standing start he did the first circuit at 69.57 miles an hour, and led Stanley Woods by two seconds. Both of these riders were in trouble on the next circuit, Woods breaking a valve spring, and Simpson having trouble with his brakes, and at the end of the second lap Hicks found himself in the first place without having materially increased his speed. He was leading Bennett by thirteen seconds, while Handley was sixteen seconds behind the latter. Handley was the fastest of the trio on the third lap, but although he passed Bennett he was unable to get on terms with Hicks.

Twenty-seven seconds now covered the first three men, and another lap found them within thirty-six seconds. With each of the trio riding a free from trouble race, there was no change in their relative positions until the end of the contest.

The high speeds that were attained told its inevitable tale on the numbers of finishers, and only sixteen of the starters completed the distance before the race was declared over.

The race was marred by a fatal accident to C. T. Ashby, of London, who crashed at Ballacraine, on his fourth circuit, and sustained a fracture of the base of the skull. He died in hospital. Ashby was a well-known figure at Brooklands, and had ridden in the Isle of Man race every year since 1924. He had also considerable experience of racing on the Continent.

Of the four Irishmen who took part, Bennett and Shaw were the only two to finish. Stanley Woods completed six of the seven circuits, and Johnston retired after four laps.

CLAY PIGEON SHOOTING.

ATHY GUN CLUB.

Athy Gun Club held their annual Clay Pigeon Shoot at the Show Grounds on Sunday last in fine weather. Most of the best clay target shots attended, and consequently very good shooting was witnessed. H. A. Clarke was again in good form, both he and J. J. Pepper making the best scoring of the day. Advantage was taken by many of the competitors of the offer made by Messrs. Thomas Henshaw and Co., of free cartridges to those who secured "possibles" with Climax and Defiance ammunition. Details:—

Event 1—Ten birds, single rise; scoring, 10 and 5—H. A. Clarke, J. Pepper and T. McDermott, each 100. Shoot-off—McDermott, 1st; Pepper, 2nd; Clarke, 3rd.

Event 2—Ten birds, single rise; scoring, 10 and 5—H. A. Clarke, J. McDermott, T. Henshaw and P. J. Frayne, each 100. Shoot-off—Henshaw, 1st; Clarke, 2nd; McDermott, 3rd.

Event 3—Ten birds, single rise; scoring, 10 and 5—J. Pepper, P. J. Frayne and T. McDermott, each 100. Shoot-off—McDermott, 1st; Pepper, 2nd; Frayne, 3rd.

Event 4—Ten birds, single rise; scoring, 10 and 5—H. A. Clarke, J. Pepper, P. J. Frayne, Commandant Hannon and T. McDermott, each 100. In the shoot-off Clarke and Pepper made a "possible" each, and in the second shoot-off H. A. Clarke won.

T. Henshaw, who won first prize in the second event, kindly presented it to the club again, and it was put up for competition as, viz.:—Ten birds, double rise; scoring, 5 points each "kill," and it resulted in a win for J. McDermott; C. Sloewd being second and H. A. Clarke third.

THE WORKMAN CLARK CASE.

APPEAL IN THE LORDS.

STATEMENTS IN A PROSPECTUS.

From Our Correspondent.

LONDON, Monday.

In the House of Lords to-day Viscount Sumner and Lords Blanesburgh, Atkin, Tomlin and Thankerton began the hearing of two appeals which arose out of the latest action by Mr. William Urquhart, a Belfast coachbuilder, for damages for alleged "misrepresentation, fraud, conspiracy, breach of trust and breach of contract" in connection with an issue of £3,000,000 of £7 per cent. Debenture Stock made in 1920 by Workman, Clark and Co., Ltd., shipbuilders, Belfast.

The defendants to the action, who were now the appellants, were Sir George Smith Clark, Mr. Charles Edward Allan, and Mr. George Ernest Clark; and Sir Edward Paulet Stracey, Sir Edward Mackay Edgar and others, who formerly carried on business as Sperling and Co., as well as Mr. Robert Alfred Workman.

AMALGAMATION SCHEME.

The issue of the stock formed one of the steps in a scheme for the amalgamation of Workman, Clark and Co., Ltd., with the Northumberland Shipbuilding Company, Ltd.; William Doxford and Sons, Ltd., shipbuilders; John Watson, Ltd., colliery proprietors, and the Lanarkshire Steel Co., Ltd.

In pursuance of the scheme, the share capital of the Belfast company was purchased on behalf of the Northumberland company at a total cost of £3,456,000 by means of temporary loans, and the debenture stock of the Belfast company was issued through the medium of an agreement between the company and Sperling and Co., immediately followed by a prospectus offering the stock for sub-sale to the public, the stock being then allotted direct to the sub-purchasers on the nomination of the financial house.

ALLEGATION OF FRAUD.

Mr. Urquhart was the original sub-purchaser of £200 stock at the sale price of £190, and in this statement of claim he charged that the prospectus falsely represented that the debenture stock was in existence and had been purchased by Sperling and Co. for cash; that it had been issued by Workman, Clark and Co., Ltd., in the ordinary course of business on assets of the company secured by a trust deed. It was also alleged that the prospectus concealed the fact that Sperling and Co. had agreed to purchase the entire share capital of Workman, Clark and Co., Ltd., for £3,456,000.

Mr. Justice Brown, in the Northern Ireland King's Bench Division, held that there was no case to be left to the jury against Sir George Smith Clark, Mr. Charles E. Allan, Sir George E. Clark, or Sir John Esplen in respect of the allegation of fraudulent misrepresentation in the prospectus or offer of sale, and he dismissed the action against them. He held that there was a case to be left to the jury against the other defendants in respect of certain of the misrepresentations alleged. The learned judge also held that the offer for sale was issued by Sperling and Co., and that the case did not come within Section 84 of the Companies (Consolidation) Act, 1908.

NEW TRIAL ORDERED.

The trial of the action was to have proceeded in respect of what had been ruled to be proper to be left to the jury, when the remaining defendants, given leave to amend their defence, brought into Court the sum of £130, which the plaintiff accepted in satisfaction of his claim on the first cause of action.

Mr. Justice Brown thereupon ordered the defendant to pay the plaintiff his general costs of action. He also directed that the £130 should be paid out of Court to the plaintiff, and that judgment should be entered for the defendants upon the second and third causes of action with costs, and that there should be a set-off in respect of costs.

On appeal by Mr. Urquhart, the Court of Appeal ordered a new trial, and the defendants now appealed to the House of Lords.

Mr. H. P. MacMillan, K.C.; Mr. Stuart Bevan, K.C.; Mr. J. H. Stamp, and Mr. Edmond Wornock (instructed by Blyth, Dutton, Hortley and Blyth, Old Broad street, agents for Robert Wallace, of Belfast, and Nicholson, Graham and Jones, agents for McLean and Son, of Belfast) appeared for Sir George Clark, Mr. C. E. Allan, and Mr. G. E. Clark.

Mr. Wilfred Greene, K.C.; Mr. J. M. Whitaker, and Mr. Charles Bertrand Marriott (instructed by Deacon and Co., Great St. Helens) were for Sir Edward Stracey and others.

Mr. E. J. Morphy, K.C.; Mr. A. K. Overend, K.C. (both of the Irish Bar), Mr. A. S. Comyns Carr, K.C., and Mr. John H. S. Russell (instructed by Carter and Bell, Eastcheap, agents for T. Erskine Alexander, Belfast) were for Mr. Urquhart.

A TEST CASE.

Mr. H. P. MacMillan, K.C., counsel for the first set of appellants, mentioned that the action was one of a number of similar actions, Mr. Urquhart's case having been selected by a committee of stockholders to be fought at the expense of a fund in the hands of the committee. The case for the appellants was that there was no evidence proper to be submitted to the jury; that any of the representations complained of were made by, or on behalf of, the appellants.

The case was one of considerable complication, and the history of it was very peculiar, the procedure in the action, so far as he was aware, being without precedent. One of the questions in the appeal was whether the acceptance by the respondent of the money paid into court was a bar to any further proceedings against the first set of appellants in respect of the issues in the actions—if any—upon which there might otherwise have been a case against them fit to be tried by a jury, and counsel's contention was that the respondent was barred from proceeding further.

The matter had passed out of the region of claim and entered the region of record. Costs in the case did not matter a cent to his clients, who were more concerned with the gravity of other parts of the case. In their relation to the whole transaction there were three or four critical matters, and an examination of the facts would be sufficient to dissociate his clients from responsibility for the issue of this prospectus or offer for sale. The history of the amalgamation showed that Sir George Clark and a group of directors whom he headed had been opposed to the sale of the company and were anxious to retain control.

Mr. MacMillan had not concluded when the further hearing was adjourned until to-day.

TUG-BOAT ADRIFT IN DUNDALK HARBOUR.

MOORING ROPES CUT.

Yesterday morning a watchman on the Dundalk Harbour Board's dredger, which had been lying along the Embankment, found that the mooring ropes of the Board's tug-boat, which had been lying behind the dredger, had been cut loose. The tug-boat swung out when the ebb tide came and got alongside the bows of the dredger. Fortunately, the matter was discovered in time, and the tug-boat taken back and remoored before damage was done. This is the second occasion during the past year in which the plant has been disturbed.

REVUE AT OLYMPIA.

Bert Grapho presented the revue "On with the Laughter" at the Olympia Theatre, Dublin, last night. It contains abundant variety of a nature associated with productions of this character. Jack Grapho, the principal comedian, was responsible for a great deal of the laughter throughout the scenes of sketches. La Tagarte was heard by appreciative audiences in a number of songs, his baritone voice being used with good effect. Anna Forrest and Rita Moya were pleasant singers.

Music and laughter were combined in "The Singing Master," in which Arthur Carlton, who appeared in several rôles, took part, while Bert Stanley, Beryl Fernandez and Ernie Miller lent able support. Mike Fox, banjoist and dancer, was applauded for his performance, and the Five Whiteleys, in an hero, Risley, pot-pourri act, and the Del Varda Girls, in acrobatic and other dances, shared the favours of the evening.

CRICKET.

TRINITY WEEK OPENED.

T. G. M'VEAGH MISSES HIS CENTURY.

DUBLIN UNIVERSITY 249
CORK COUNTY (for 2 wickets) 34

Except for a couple of showers, which curtailed play by about thirty minutes, the opening event of Trinity Week, the match against Cork County, which began yesterday in the College Park, was favoured by fine weather.

Owing to illness, P. A. Thornton was unable to play, and the side was captained by T. G. McVeagh. Being up for an examination, F. C. Jackson was also an absentee, and the vacancies were filled by O. S. Skeffington and P. J. Kiely, old Sandford Park School and Clongowes Wood College boys, respectively.

The cricket was most interesting, and Trinity left off with a slight advantage, scoring 247 and getting two of the County wickets for 34.

The University, who won the toss, occupied the wickets for four hours. Lloyd and Barber put on 47 for the opening partnership, but the feature was a splendid stand by Lloyd and McVeagh for the third wicket. Coming together when Barber and Loughrey had been dismissed for 62, they withstood the varied Southern attack for an hour and a half, remaining until the score was 170. Lloyd was then bowled by Fuge for 69. Though not quite a faultless display, Lloyd's batting was marked by sound defence, and he never failed to despatch the loose ball to the boundary. McVeagh continued to bat soundly, but had the bad luck to be caught when only one short of his hundred. Failing to get properly under a ball from Fuge, he returned a rather soft catch to the bowler.

Batting for just two hours, the old St. Columba's College boy played excellent cricket. He gave a couple of possible chances over cover's head before reaching 50, and he hit ten boundaries. Kenay batted well for 20 not out. The County tried six bowlers, of whom Fuge (four for 49) was the most successful.

Cork had an hour to bat. F. H. Hall, who opened with the Rev. W. L. Bouchier, was out, caught in the slips off T. H. Dixon, the first ball sent down, while O'Hara was sent back with only a single scored. Bouchier and Major Fuge then made a stand, and were together at the close. Dixon, who took both wickets, was almost unplayable, not a run being scored off his first eight overs.

Play will be resumed this morning at 11.30. Score:—

THE BANKERS' CUP.

ROYAL'S GOOD START.

Royal Bank and Bank of Ireland met in the first round of the Irish Bankers' Institute Cup at the Railway Union ground, Park avenue, last evening. Royal won the toss and batted first on a tricky wicket. They made a poor start, F. Twamley playing on to the first ball sent down by McClure, while Hipwell bowled Francis in his opening over, the two wickets going without a run. W. Aylward and N. Redmond stopped the rot, but they had to fight for runs, an hour producing only 30. Fahy and Jones went on, and after batting for over an hour Redmond was leg before to the latter when 23, and with Hilton bowled scoreless four were out for 45. Aylward, after a stylish display, was leg before when 27. J. R. Shanks and L. J. Heaney made a good stand, and the century was hoisted. At 134 Heaney, when 44 (five 4's) was bowled, and Shanks had a couple of boundaries in his 25. The innings closed for 162.

Play will be continued this evening at 4.30.

ENGLAND V. THE REST.

BRILLIANT BATTING BY P. G. FENDER.

Batting all day, as their opponents did on Saturday when scoring 487 for eight wickets, The Rest, if falling far short of England in the number of runs they obtained, acquitted themselves with credit at Lord's yesterday. Called upon to face a powerful and well-varied attack, backed up by probably the best fielding combination in the world, they made a fine reply after White had declared England's innings closed first thing.

The cricket was very good to watch on a pleasantly fine afternoon. At the outset the batsmen found run-getting an extremely hard task, only seventy being scored by lunch time for the loss of Crawley, who helped Dawson to put on forty-three in eighty minutes. Killick was out fourth ball after lunch, and then there came extremely attractive batting, Dawson and Duleepsinhji adding eighty-four in seventy-five minutes. Duleepsinhji brought off a number of well-varied strokes with ease, skill and grace of style. Fourth to leave at 167, Dawson hit nine fours during his stay of three hours and thirty-five minutes.

There came after the tea fine hitting by Fender, who, after Wyatt had assisted in a stand which produced seventy-eight in nearly ninety minutes, went on forcing the game in great style with powerful drives, pulls and hits to leg. He completed 100 out of 137, but two runs later, or at 306, was clean bowled by a break-back. Batting for two and a quarter hours, he hit fourteen fours. When play ceased, The Rest, with three wickets to fall, were 165 behind. Hobbs left the field soon after Robins went in, having hurt his shoulder in trying to make a catch at cover off a hard hit by Fender. Score:—

CHESS.

ALEKHINE IN AMERICA.

Special to the "Irish Times."

To meet the occasion of Dr. Alekhine's visit to America, the Chess Federation of the United States organised an international tournament in the Hotel de la Reine, Bradley Beach, New Jersey. Play began last week, and the participants, with the world's champion, were:—Bigelow, Citron, Fox, Kevitz, Kupchik, Marshall, H. Steiner, L. Steiner and Turover.

On the first day Bigelow lost to Marshall, Fox won from Citron, and three games (H. Steiner and Kevitz, L. Steiner and Kupchik, Alekhine and Turover) were adjourned. The White player is mentioned first in each instance. On the next day two games were adjourned (Kevitz and L. Steiner, Alekhine and Fox). Turover won from Bigelow, Kupchik lost to H. Steiner, and Citron lost to Marshall. Fox was maintaining a very stout defence against Alekhine in a Queen's Pawn opening, and felt confident of achieving a draw.

All the third day's games were brought to a close without adjournment. Citron lost to Kevitz, Marshall and Kupchik drew, H. Steiner lost to Turover, Bigelow lost to Alekhine, and Fox, the Canadian master, lost to L. Steiner. Alekhine's adjourned games were still unfinished, and Marshall, champion of the United States, led with a score of 2½, followed by Turover with 2.

The hopes of the Canadian, who is well known to London players, were not to be fulfilled, and Alekhine won the two outstanding games after resumption. Bigelow played the English opening in his games against Marshall and Alekhine and lost them both. Kevitz and Kupchik played the Sicilian defence on the opening day, and Kupchik and H. Steiner had a Ruy Lopez. With these exceptions all the foregoing were Queen's Pawn openings.

LATEST PARTICULARS.

A special telegram from Bradley Beach, dated Sunday, says the final stages of the International Chess Tournament have now begun, showing Alekhine still leading, and not having even a drawn game. In the sixth round Fox defeated Bigelow in thirty moves. The Dominion player was unable to Castle, but received sufficient compensation when he captured Bigelow's centre pawn. Turover was the next to finish. He employed the Sicilian Defence against Citron, and built up his forces in a solid array, which the Porto Rican tried in vain to penetrate. When Turover assumed the aggressive, he quickly turned the tables on his youthful opponent, and won in thirty moves.

The keenest interest was shown in Alekhine's game with the American champion, Marshall. The last-named chose the Queen's Pawn opening; four Knights were soon exchanged, and later four Bishops disappeared and the players were left finally with the queens and rooks and four pawns apiece. Alekhine had a passed pawn on the queen's rook file, which gave him a slight advantage in position. Marshall, however, was confident in his ability to come through with a draw when the game was resumed.

Kupchik and Kevitz were even when play was stopped after thirty-two moves. H. Steiner, who was opposed by L. Steiner, likewise had not finished at the end of the session. The New Yorker played impetuously, but a cool defence gave his Hungarian namesake the advantage of two pawns and a better position when the clock stopped. The game between Kevitz and L. Steiner, adjourned from the second round, was won by Steiner.

The present standing of the players is as follows:—

Alekhine—Won 4, lost 0;
Marshall—Won 4, lost 1;
Turover—Won 4, lost 1;
L. Steiner—Won 3, lost 1;
Fox—Won 3, lost 3;
Kupchik—Won 2, lost 2;
Kevitz—Won 2, lost 3;
H. Steiner—Won 1½, lost 3½;
Citron—Won 1, lost 5;
Bigelow—Won ½, lost 5½.

ENNISKILLEN FAIR.

Enniskillen fair was held yesterday, and there were better prices all round for cattle. Six months old calves were from £6 to £8; one-year-old calves, £10 to £12 10s.; two-year-olds, £14 to £16; three-year-olds, £15 to £17; springing heifers, £15 to £21; springing cows, £18 to £25; milking cattle, £16 to £21. Beef showed a steady rise, and was 47s. 6d. to 52s. 6d. per cwt. There was a large supply of suckers in the pig fair, and a keen demand brought them from £3 10s. to £6 10s. per pair. Fat sheep were £3 to £4.

LAWN TENNIS.

THE NET GAME.

DO NOT OVERWORK IT UNLESS YOU ARE A COCHET.

ALL-IMPORTANT ANTICIPATION.

By D. M. GREIG
(The English International and Doubles Champion of Germany).

I suppose that if one took the opinion of a number of lawn tennis enthusiasts as to which player—I mean which man player—was the most attractive to watch, the majority would say Jean Borotra. When Borotra is on the court, you know that there will be no long-drawn out rallies from the base line, which sometimes become tedious to watch, for he has but one objective—the net—and once there, the point is usually finished by a brilliant volley, which is a joy to the eye.

Cochet, another of the all-conquering Frenchmen, and Vincent Richards, the American player, are other great players who are for ever attacking at the net.

Apart from these three great players, however, I can think of none among the world's best players who crowd the net and attack all the time. It would seem that the majority of the finest players feel that net play should only be indulged in when they have forced their opponents into positions which practically assure them an opening at the net.

Those who have been fortunate enough to watch W. T. Tilden, who is probably the greatest player the world has ever seen, and Rene Lacoste playing against one another will doubtless recollect how seldom either player advanced to the net to volley. Each man knew that to go up on anything but a good length, well-placed stroke was to court disaster, and, consequently, little volleying was seen; but when a volley was made, it was made decisively and finally.

WHICH TO FOLLOW.

The average player having watched these great masters of the two different schools of play might sometimes wonder which type of game to try and follow.

Well, I must confess that, much as I admire the volleying game, I think the average player would be ill advised to model his game on that of a Borotra or a Cochet. On the other hand, the volleying game should by no means be neglected—it is of the greatest value.

In other words, I feel that the average player needs to select judiciously the stroke on which he is going to advance up to the net.

Before I go further, let me explain why I do not think the all-volleying game can be exploited with success by any but super players.

The secret of the success of Borotra and Cochet lies in their uncanny anticipation of where the opponent is going to hit the ball. Time after time I have seen Cochet go up to the net after he had made quite an indifferent return to the middle of his opponents' court. His opponent against almost any other player would win the point by passing him on one side of the court or the other, but Cochet, with some sixth sense, divines where the ball is going, before the stroke is made, and is there at the net waiting to hit it firmly away for a winner.

INHERENT QUALITY.

It is possible, with practice to improve one's actual strokes until they are really good, but the sense of anticipation necessary to play a continuous volleying game is born in one and will not be acquired.

This brings me back to the point I have already made, that care must be taken to select the right ball on which to go up to the net.

Speaking generally, I should say that it is not sound policy to come up to the net unless you have placed your previous stroke within two yards of your opponent's base line. To come up when you have hit the ball only as far as the service line is sucidal, as you give your opponent such a wide angle to pass you. I must have lost dozens of matches by persisting in going up to the net when I had made a bad ground stroke.

To play the volleying game with success, you must play a good ground stroke first.

Another point which should be borne in mind is that when you do go up to the net to volley get as near to the net as you can; don't hang about the service line. Unless you get close in, as likely as not you will have to play one of the most difficult strokes in the game—the low volley. You would probably make a poor return and be left in the middle of the court at the mercy of your opponent.

HIT, DON'T PAT.

When volleying near the net play to win the point outright; don't put the ball into play—hit it. If you fail to make a winning stroke on your first volley you very often will not touch the ball again.

Some players are very fond of playing a "stop" volley; that is, they "chip" the ball and just drop it over the net, leaving their opponent with no chance of reaching the ball from the back of the court. The danger of this stroke is that if you hit it just a little too hard, so that your opponent can reach it, you are almost certain to lose the point.

Sometimes one finds an opponent with a very weak back-hand stroke, and it is against such a player that a net game is usually very successful. If you bombard the weak side and get in really close to the net it will often leave our opponent only able to put up an easy kill to you—while had you stayed at the back of the court, all you could do would be to put the ball into play again.

SERVICE FOLLOW-UP.

Some players try following up their service straight to the net to volley the return of service. To do this with any hope of success, you must move very quickly as you must get well inside the service line to be able to make a good return; otherwise, you will be caught with th eball at your feet, and unless you are a Cochet, who half volleys, with contemptuous ease, you will probably lose the point.

Personally, I think that to follow up your service once in a while is a very sound policy, as your opponent will probably be somewhat surprised, and will either miss the return altogether trying to do too much or will give you an easy one. I do not recommend doing it too often however. First of all, because it is a very exhausting game to play, and secondly because your opponent will get used to it, and unless you are a first class volleyer you will be in trouble.

Lastly, when you are up near the net, keep on your toes. You have much less time to take the ball than you would have at the back of the court, and you have got to be ready to go sideways or backwards very quickly.

There is no doubt that volleying brightens up the game enormously, and also that no player can ever be described as a great player unless he is able to volley when the occasion arises.

Big Car Comfort but—only an £8 Tax.

SUCH a little engine but such comfort, such power, such acceleration! It seems incredible that a car so roomy to sit in, so fast and lively to drive should have the £8 tax and a running economy you've thought was confined to the baby car class.

Only Fiat could have done it! And, in truth, only in the Fiat 9 can you get such a combination of comfort and economy.

You must try it to appreciate that the incredible has come true. You must ride in it to experience the comfort of its seating for four adults, the ampleness of its leg room and head room and body room. You must drive it yourself to realise its acceleration, its freedom from fuss, the high speeds it will average, the simple silkiness of its gear change.

Any Fiat dealer will be proud to let you try this remarkable car. Write or call for illustrated catalogue and name of nearest dealer.

QUESTION OF QUALITY OF TEA.

At the meeting of the Waterford Mental Hospital Committee yesterday a letter was received from the Free State Trade Department stating that a local tea sample was 4d. per lb. inferior to the official sample.

Mr. Aylward asked was it not a fact that the Trade Department was endeavouring to prevent them doing any trade with the local contractors. When the Department questioned the quality of the tea accepted by the Committee on a previous occasion, the Committee's sample, when sent to a London expert, was proved to be better than the Trade Department's sample.

It was decided to place the facts before the Trade Department.

FINANCIAL NEWS AND NOTES

TONE AND COMMENT.

DUBLIN: "NEW" ACCOUNT INFLUENCES.

BANK STOCK AGAIN STRONG.

Settlement influences still contributed to affect prices to some extent on 'Change, but business briskness was absent, except in very few instances. There were erratic movements in prices of National Loans, and British Funds fluctuated also. Increased support was bid for Dublin Port and Docks 5 per cent. Stock, and the quotation rose 1½ points on last marking of "business done." The scarcity of Bank of Ireland Stock was again a feature, and the price further rose 1½. Nationals were harder and Royals easier. Guinness Ordinary received substantial support and closed 1s. higher. Marconi 10s. shares were inclined to harden. Great Southern Railway Debentures fell one point, and Great Northern Preference also tended to ease, with a minimum of dealing. Alliance Gas steadied a little from recent dulness. Courtaulds were harder, but Branston Art Silk fell away further. Dunlop Rubber Ordinary rallied a little, while Imperial Chemicals were harder. Imperial Tobaccos left off lower, but active bidding for Margarines carried the price upwards again. Leyland Motors fell further. Chartered shares show a big rise on last marking here. Irish-American Oil Preference were marked nearly 1s. a share lower.

LONDON CHEERFUL.

BUSINESS ON A LARGER SCALE.

The London Stock Markets opened the week and the new account with a generally cheerful tone. The accumulation of orders over the week-end gave the markets an appearance of activity; for business was on a larger scale than for some time past. Public orders to buy were quite numerous and widely distributed. Business was not confined to the speculative sections, but spread itself through other markets, with the exception of Government Stocks, which were well maintained without actual movement. Among Foreign Government Stocks Argentine Rescission 4 per cent. again showed to advantage, and closed with a further rise of a point, while German 7 per cent. also rose 1. Home Rails were a brighter market, though the early improvements were not always held. Great Westerns finished with a rise of a point at 86, and London and North-Easterns were better. Canadian Pacifics were easier, but finished only a point lower at 231 x.d. South American Rails were firm, with Buenos Ayres issues usually a fraction higher. American Rails lost some of their recent improvement, Atchison being 3 points lower. Oils were more active, and business was not confined to Eagles, as of late; for other issues shared in the activity, several gains being marked. Cheerfulness characterised the Mining market. Rhodesians were active and moved to higher levels generally, while Kaffirs were bright. Among Industrials Dunlops went better in the earlier dealings, and the price showed an early advance, which was not quite held at the finish, though there were indications that the shares were receiving more support than during the last account. One of the causes of the recent depression has been the circulation of rumours that the company has lost the London General Omnibus contract, but this was denied during the day. United Molasses were again strong, and several other Industrial favourites made further headway.

DUNLOP RUBBERS.

At one time yesterday Dunlop Rubbers showed a considerable recovery, a movement that suggested bear closing, though it is thought that in part the recent severe decline was due to realisations by bulls tired of waiting for an improvement. There have been other factors, of course, in particular, perhaps, the prospect of the company being adversely affected if and when the Labour Government removes the import duty on tyres. Possibly this would not make very much difference, for already the company is experiencing competition from foreign concerns that have built factories for the production of tyres in England. The outlook is obscure, especially as the company has power to issue an additional 3,000,000 shares. There is a very large public interest in Dunlop Rubber Shares, and some holders have seen the price of the 6s. 8d. shares gradually decline from last year's highest of 36s. 4½d. to 17s. 6d., reached on Friday last. During 1927 the shares reached 37s. 9d., so that the depreciation in market value compared with that point is not much less than £22,500,000, as there are 22,488,700 shares in issue.

MOVEMENTS IN INDUSTRIALS.

Industrial Shares moved irregularly during the account. Those of Motor Companies gave way on the prospect of the abolition of the McKenna duties, Dennis Bros. falling 4s. 3d., Leyland 3s. 3d., and Napier and Singer 1s. 8d. There was also a drop of 1s. 6d. in Dunlop Rubber, which made up at 18s. 3d. In other directions the Cable Companies' securities gave way. Some of the international shares were prominently good. Kreuger and Toll "B" rose 2⅜, United Molasses 11/16, and Margarine Union 2s. 9d. There was also a sharp rise in Siemens Bros. allowing for the dividend deduction, while among Breweries Hoare and Co. rose 3s. 6d. Gramophone (H.M.V.) made up ⅜ higher. In other departments there was little of note beyond advances of ⅝ and 1½ in Peru Corporation Ord. and Preference, respectively.

THE MOVEMENT IN OILS.

Oils were a section which witnessed greater activity and strength during the past fortnight. Mexican Eagles were prominent with a rise of 1s. 9d., Burmahs advanced 3/16, Creole 3/16, and Shells and Anglo-Persian 3/16 each, while Lobitos made up ⅛ higher. Royal Dutch advanced 1¼, and among the smaller shares Trinidad Centrals rose 1s. 3d.

TRANSVAAL GOLD OUTPUT FOR MAY.

The total gold output of the mines of the Transvaal for the month of May amounted to 897,598 ounces of fine gold, being an increase of 25,475 ounces as compared with the previous month. The Transvaal native labour returns for May show that the number of natives employed at the end of last month by members of the Witwatersrand Native Labour Association and contractors were: at gold mines, 195,733; coal mines, 15,852; diamond mines, 5,473—total, 217,058.

EXTENSION OF CANADIAN NATIONAL RAILWAYS.

A scheme for the extension of the terminal facilities of the Canadian National Railways at Montreal involving an expenditure of 50,000,000 dollars, has been approved by the Railway Committee of the House of Commons. The project will be undertaken immediately, and will be completed in seven years. The plan will mean the accommodation of 95 per cent. of all Canadian National trains entering or leaving Montreal by the tunnel which twelve years ago was built by the Canadian Northern Railway Company through the mountain overlooking the city. This tunnel will become the main outlet and inlet of the Canadian National Railways at Montreal. Above the proposed terminals there will be available in the heart of the metropolis 600,000 square feet of leasehold property for the erection of office buildings, hotels, shops and selected structures, the adequate rental of which will eventually provide for the interest at six per cent. on the investment in the new terminals. One-third of the 50,000 dollars will be spent on the passenger station, and two-thirds on the elimination of over one hundred level crossings and on other features of the project.

SPHINX ELECTRIC.

In pursuance of its policy to extend the ramifications of the business, Sphinx Electric has acquired a controlling share interest in Setalite, Ltd., and Thornton Norris Products. Proof of the progress of this company is to be found in the fact that it now has 7,800 trading accounts, among which are contracts with the General Post Office, the Royal Courts of Justice, New Scotland Yard, and several municipal bodies throughout Great Britain and Ireland. Sphinx Electric, which has an authorised capital of £150,000, was formed in March to acquire the business of Auto-Bulbs, Ltd., and the issued capital of Sphinx Electric Supplies (Ireland), manufacturers of electric lamps, fittings, etc. In February last an issue was made at par of 290,000 5s. Preference and 580,000 1s. Ordinary shares.

INDUSTRIAL MARKET.

MOLASSES UP AGAIN.

CANADIAN-AMERICANS FAVOURED.

Rates in connection with the carry-over were much the same as on last occasion. The general charge was 7 to 8 p.c., but up to 9 p.c. ruled in the case of Gramophones (H.M.V.), Vocalions, Associated, Anglo-Atlantics and British Cement Products. On Dunlops, "Bats" and "Imps" the rate was 6 to 7 p.c., with Courtaulds arranged at 7 p.c. and Columbia Graphs. at 6 p.c. Trading for new account was only moderate, with price movements irregular. Good support was noticeable for all the Canadian-American issues. Hydro-Electrics went ahead to the extent of 1¼ to 37¼, with Barcelona Traction Com. marked up 2 to 53. Electricals generally maintained a fairly firm front, though among the Equipments some profit-taking was noticeable in Siemens, which reacted 1s. 3d. to 31s.

British Cement Products went "ex rights," but closed fractionally better at 2 11/16, while the Defd. put on 1s. to 22s. 6d. The new Ords. proved quite an active counter, business being recorded up to 1s. premium. In the Land and Investment department, Hudson's Bays found renewed support, and after being bid up to 5⅞, closed at 5 13/16, thus registering a further improvement of 1/16. Banks were rather irregular, while very little business was transacted in the Insurance section. Cunards proved a little more active than of late, but moved within narrow limits, and closed without variation. Elder-Dempster Prefs. lost 3d. to 16s. 3d.

Motor Shares had a heavy appearance, noticeably Leylands, which fell 3s. 3d. to 52s. 6d., with Dennis on offer around 2 1/16. Iron and Steel descriptions seemed rather undecided, apart from Wm. Cory, which, in anticipation of the report, improved 2s. 6d. to 62s. 6d. Guest Keens rallied to 39s. 9d. After rallying to 86, Radio Corporations came on offer again in the "street," where they finished at 84¼, which left them 4¼ down on the day. Marconis steadied to 76s. 6d., and the Preference to 4 5/16, but little disposition was shown to give support to Sable securities, which closed on the dull side.

The "Record" leaders moved within narrow limits. Gramophones—H.M.V.—were finally unaltered at 17 9/16, with Columbia Graphophones marked down ¼ to 13¼. Although there was not much change on balance a fair business was recorded in the Brewery section. Distillers were dealt in up to 78s. 6d., Guinness at 88s. 9d., Hoare Ordinary at 76s. 6d., and Watney Deferred at 63s. 7½d. Bass Ordinary were wanted at 71s. 3d. Tobaccos failed to make headway. Carreras "A" shares shed ⅛ at 14⅝, with "Bats" and "Imps" unchanged. Warings came in for renewed attention among Stores, and put on 1s. to 24s. 6d. Aerated Breads encountered sellers, and went back 1s. 6d. to 26s., with Lipton Ordinary 7½d. easier at 4s. 3d. Margarines ruled steady, the Unions at 91s. 6d. and the Unies at 93s. 9d.

Little of interest transpired in the Rayon and Textile sections. British Celanese held at 2 1/16 and Courtaulds at 4⅛, but American Celanese fell away to 7⅞. Among Textiles, Bradford Dyers stiffened to 41s. 9d. and Sewing Cottons to 2 13/16, but the rest ruled dull. In other directions, United Molasses continued to attract a good deal of attention, the price advancing at one time to 7 9/16, finishing with a net gain of 5/32 at 7 19/32. Dunlops were more active, but after opening a better market at 18s. 4½d. they fell back later, and finished at 17s. 9d. Imperial Chemicals were revived, the Ordinary improving to 35s. 7½d. and the Deferred to 14s. 6d.

Recent Issue Dealings.—Quite a fair business was put through in the 1s. shares of International Pulverising and Grinding Machines in the neighbourhood of 2s., at which they eventually finished. Falls of 3d. were registered by Albanian National Breweries and De Lavauds at 2s. 9d., Zinc Manufacturing "A" at 3s. premium, and Cow and Gate Prefs. at 22s. 6d. Faradex-Seraphone at 1s. 6d. and Guinea Gramophones at 4½d. eased a trifle, but Berkeley Property at 9s. 6d., Lancashire Electric New at 28s., Metduros at 2s. 6d., Pass and Joyce at 5s. 9d., and Young Accumulators at 7s. 3d., all hardened slightly. Olympia Ord. put on 6d. to 6s. 6d., while the Prefs. shed a few pence to 18s. 6d.; Sphinx Electric Ord. and Prefs. gained the turn at 2s. 7½d. and 5s. 10½d., respectively. Yorkshire Products Investment Prefs. proved a dull market, and gave way 9d. to 16s. 6d.

OIL MARKET LIVELY.

Charges for the continuation of bargains were unaltered, the general rate being 7 to 8 per cent., with exceptions provided by Shell, registered and bearer, and Royal Dutch, which were arranged on the basis of 6 to 7 per cent. Shells and the Eagle and Controlled issues were "takers-in," but Anglo-Persians, Burmahs, and Lobitos were "givers-on."

Following the improvement in the closing days of the past week, the commencement of business for the new account was characterised by all-round strength, the prices of the leaders and several of the more speculative favourites advancing in the early hours in response to active bidding. The receipt of favourable advices from New York over the week-end provided a helpful factor.

Considerable liveliness was witnessed in the shares of the Anglo-Persian Oil Company. Shortly after mid-day the company announced a distribution at the rate of 12½ per cent. per annum for the nine months, or 1s. 10½d. per share. Although some profit-taking followed the announcement, Anglo-Persian shares still registered an appreciable gain on the day.

RUBBERS STEADY.

Changes in Rubber Share prices were generally in favour of holders, but movements were not numerous. The price of the material was quietly steady at 10⅜d. for spot delivery. Stocks in London were 96 tons up on the week, and at Liverpool 108 tons up, but these increases had been anticipated.

LONDON MINING MARKET STRONG.

NORTHERN RHODESIANS SET THE LEAD.

Quite a blaze of strength marked the resumption of business yesterday, and there is no doubt that public interest in the Mining market has been greatly stimulated by the course of events during the past week or so. Brokers spent a very busy time in executing new commissions, and as the final arrangements of the carry-over were in progress these sections presented a very animated appearance. About midday a lull occurred, as there was naturally a desire on the part of professionals to secure profits, but the popular shares were readily absorbed and the tone remained as strong as ever.

To the Northern Rhodesians belong the honour of reviving interest in Mining shares, but other departments have gradually followed the lead thus set them, and business has broadened in an encouraging fashion.

The Kaffir section, for instance, exhibited increased animation, and quiet buying of nearly all classes of shares was in progress, with the result that, as floating supplies were none too plentiful, many further gains were scored.

Anglo-American Corporation were wanted in connection with the company's Northern Rhodesian interests, and advanced sharply, while C.M.S. and Rand Selection sympathised. Of the other finance descriptions, Johnnies were a strong market, and Union Corporation, Gold Trust and Generals strengthened. East Rand and West Rand were again supported, and the whole market closed quite firm, not a single decline of importance being recorded at the close. With the price of tin £2 5s. up at £202 2s. 6d. per ton, the better tendency noticeable in the Share market last week was well maintained. Rio Tintos rose sharply and other Copper shares were firm. Mexican Corporation improved 9d. to 15s., and San Francisco gained 1/16. Closing prices:—

DIVIDENDS AND REPORTS.

ANGLO-PERSIAN OIL CO.—Dividend at the rate of 12½ per cent. per annum, equal to 1/10½ per share for the nine months ended December 31, 1928. It will be recalled that at the annual meeting in November last it was stated that it had been decided in future to terminate the company's accounting period at December 31 each year instead of at March 31. £600,000 is allocated to the several reserve funds and £201,051 for extra depreciation. Last year £800,000 was allocated to reserves and £455,267 for extra depreciation. The carry forward would have been increased by £60,812 but for the fact that an amount of £513,434 paid on account of excess profits duty, leaving the amount to go forward at £1,771,645. Last time a surplus of £2,224,267 was carried forward. The dividend last time of 7½ per cent. equal to 1/6 per share, was 4½d. per share less than that for the past nine months. The Government holds £7,500,000 of the £13,425,000 issued Ordinary capital of the company, and the amount to be derived in respect of the dividend on this holding for the past broken period is £703,125, which compares with £562,500 for the complete previous twelve months.

ASSOCIATED REINSURERS—Final dividend of 7½ per cent., less tax, on original paid-up capital, making a total distribution for the year of 12½ per cent., less tax.

BARCLAY, PERKINS AND CO.—Final dividends of 1/- per share, less tax, upon £1 Pref. Share capital, and a dividend at rate of 11 per cent. per annum, less tax, for three months on Ord. Shares.

BARCELONA TRACTION, LIGHT AND POWER—Interim dividend at the rate of 1 per cent. (i.e., 50 cents. per share) on Ord. (same as last year); usual quarterly dividend at the rate of 1¾ per cent. (i.e., $1.75 per share) on issued 7 per cent. Non-Cumulative Participating Pref., and an additional dividend of 1 per cent. (i.e., $1.00 per share) on said 7 per cent. Pref. (corresponding with dividend of 1 per cent. on Ord.), in accordance with their participating rights.

DORADA RAILWAY—Further dividend of 5 per cent. net, making 8 per cent. net for the year. (Same as last year.)

DERBY TEA—Final Ord. dividend of 10 per cent., less tax, making 15 per cent. for the year.

ELECTRIC AND GENERAL INVESTMENT CO.—Full dividend on the Ord. Shares of 2/- per share, being 10 per cent. per annum on the capital paid up thereon, and a dividend on the Deferred Shares of 1/- per share, both distributions being first since 10 per cent. and 50 per cent. respectively for 1913-14. The outstanding balance of Income Certificates of £3,783 will be repaid at par, less income tax, against the surrender of receipted Certificates, on July 1, 1929.

EDISON BELL—Interim dividend of 5 per cent. (1/- per share), less tax, on the Ord. Shares, and also a dividend at the rate of 7½ per cent. per annum, less tax, on the Pref. Shares for six months. Last accounting period was for fifteen months to September 30 last. No interim was paid on the Ordinaries, but 12½ per cent. was distributed for whole period.

ISA BHEEL TEA.—Final Ord. dividend of 5 per cent., less tax, making 10 per cent., less tax, for year.

JOHN MACKINTOSH AND SONS.—Dividend of 1/6 per share on 20 per cent. Cum. Prefd. Ord. Shares.

KRAMAT PULAI—Interim dividend of 2½ per cent., less tax. (Same.)

MALEBER TEA.—Final dividend of 11 per cent., making a total of 15 per cent. for year.

MORGANS BREWERY.—Interim dividend at rate of 7½ per cent. per annum on Ord. Shares. (Same as last year.)

NORTHAMPTON BREWERY.—Interim dividend on Ord. shares of 1/- per share, free of tax. (Same as last year.)

SCOTTISH TEA AND RUBBER TRUST.—Final dividend of 10 per cent. actual, less tax, making 12½ per cent. for year. (Same.)

SECOND SCOTTISH MORTGAGE AND TRUST.—Ord. dividend of 3½ per cent. actual, less tax.

UNITED RIVER PLATE TELEPHONE CO.—Final dividend of 5 per cent. on the Ord. shares, making 8 per cent. for the year, free of tax, the same as last year, leaving to be carried forward £158,219. The directors regret, states the report, that the results for the period covered by the accounts have not enabled the company to meet its usual dividend without drawing up the amount brought forward from the previous year. This is principally due to the reduction of the tariffs forced upon the company in the last quarter of 1928.

COMPANY MEETING.

THE EAGLE OIL TRANSPORT COMPANY, LIMITED.

PROFITS AFFECTED BY LOW RATES.

The eighteenth ordinary general meeting of this company was held at Winchester House, Old Broad street, London, E.C., yesterday, the Hon. Clive Pearson (chairman of the company) presiding.

The Secretary (Mr. C. H. M. C. Wilson) read the notice convening the meeting.

The Chairman said:—Gentlemen, the net profit of £519,095 shows a considerable reduction as compared with last year. Freights were at a low level when we met a year ago, and they remained low during the whole of 1928. It was to provide for such periods of depression that we conserved the large profits made in 1927, and created thereout a dividend reserve. Had this reserve not been in being we could have asked our charterers for a freight rate during 1928 sufficient to meet our depreciation and the dividend on our Preference Shares, but under our arrangements with our charterers we have utilised the reserve, and thus they have not been called upon to pay a rate of freight higher than that ruling on the market. As shown in the report, the profits for the year have enabled us to write off our normal depreciation of 5 per cent. on first cost—amount of £481,000—and, in order to maintain the Preference dividend at the usual rate, we have, as provided in our charterers' agreement, drawn upon the reserve to the extent of £122,500, leaving us with a balance of £277,500 at the credit thereof.

I am again able to report that your vessels have given satisfactory service throughout the year, and have been well maintained. Repair costs have been normal, and the repair reserve now stands at £665,104, the small reduction being due to a charge against the reserve in respect of Lloyd's surveys carried out during the year.

As stated in the directors' report, three of your vessels—the "San Jeronimo," "San Lorenzo," and "San Nazario"—were sold during the year, and the "San Patricio" has also recently been sold, at prices which your directors consider satisfactory. As a result, the heading in the balance sheet, "Cost of steamers, etc.," shows a reduction as compared with last year, since the first cost of the vessels sold disappears from this item. Similarly the depreciation which had already been written off the ships sold has disappeared from the depreciation reserve, and consequently, although we have transferred from this year's earnings the sum of £481,000 to depreciation, the reserve does not show a corresponding increase over last year. I have already referred to the repair and dividend reserves. Sundry creditors show a reduction of some £113,000, whilst cash at £2,147,000 shows an increase of some £366,000.

Since we last met, shipping has sustained a severe loss in the death of Mr. Havelock Wilson, the President of the National Sailors' and Firemen's Union. For many years his thoughts were turned towards peace in industry, and his efforts greatly helped in the maintenance of good relations between shipowners and their men, to the mutual benefit of both sides.

In reviewing the company's operations during the seventeen years of its existence, we are proud of the fact that our captains, officers and engineers continue to show an increasingly long record of service, and that a large proportion of the lower ratings have served continuously with the company for long periods. Our thanks are due to them all for their good and loyal service. Our managers and their technical and clerical staff have also earned our thanks for their attention to your interests and the resulting efficiency and economical running of your vessels.

The Chairman concluded by moving the adoption of the report and accounts, which was agreed to unanimously.

THE MONEY MARKET.

CONDITIONS STILL EASY.

Conditions remained very comfortable in Lombard street, there being ample supplies of credit available. Most of the old day-to-day money was renewed at 4 p.c., while fresh advances over the night were offered at 4 down to 3¾ p.c. Weekly fixtures went on at 4½ p.c.

Discount rates were comparatively steady, business being quiet. Fine three months' Bank bills were quoted at 5¼ to 5 9/32 p.c., and the banks were buyers of ninety days' Treasuries at 5¼ p.c. The "hot" bills were quoted at 5¼ to 5 9/32 p.c.

The Bank of England announced that bar gold to the value of £10,320 had been sold. A further improvement took place in silver in the absence of selling, the spot price rising ⅛d. to 24 3/16d., and forward 1/16d. to 24 3/16d. per oz. Gold was unaltered at 84s. 11½d. per fine oz.

The New York exchange finished a shade easier at a trifle under 4.84⅞, but Montreal rose 1/16 to 4.88⅝. Swiss francs and Belgian belgas, especially the latter, were cheaper, with which exceptions European rates quoted less for sterling, but there was no further alteration in German marks. The Dutch rate receded slightly to 12.07⅝, and the Danish and Swedish quotations were noticeably lower. The recovery in Spanish pesetas proceeded, the Madrid rate finishing a little over 34. French francs and Italian lire improved to a slight extent.

FINANCIAL PARAGRAPH.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA RUPEE LOAN.

A Simla telegram states that the Government of India announce that a rupee loan in two issues is to be floated, both at 5 per cent. The first will be issued at 96.8 per cent., repayable at par not earlier than 1939 and not later than 1944, giving a redemption yield of 5.34 per cent. The second will be issued at 98, repayable at par in 1935, giving a redemption yield of 5.39. The former loan is subject to a maximum subscription of twelve crores of rupees—£9,000,000—and the latter of fifteen crores of rupees—£11,250,000. The need of a sterling loan will be determined by the result of the response to the rupee Loan. The Government has instituted a depreciation fund, a particularly interesting feature of which is the provision for utilising any excess of over 5 per cent. standing to the credit of the depreciation fund for the purchase and cancellation of other Government securities. The increase of about half per cent. in the nominal rate of interest and the redemption yield is ascribed mainly to the unfavourable developments in the international money market. It is stated that world conditions, including the orgy of speculation in the United States, which led to an increase in the Bank rate in England and elsewhere, also had an inevitable effect on the rates at which the Government of India could expect to obtain money in India. The notification also gives conversion rights enabling the long-term loan to be tendered as the equivalent of cash in subscriptions to any future loan of the Government of India.

At the meeting of Pembroke Urban District Council yesterday the Mayo resolution suggesting reduction of Dail and Senate membership and reductions in official salaries was marked "Read."

YACHTING.

KINGSTOWN REGATTA.

RACING FLEET ARRIVES.

Early yesterday forenoon the bulk of the racing fleet had arrived at Kingstown for the joint regatta of the Royal Irish and Royal St. George Yacht Clubs on to-morrow and the next day. There were some enthusiasts even who had looked for their arrival on the evening before, and who kept their vigil up to nightfall. It was known, for instance, that the yachts had left Cowes, and were on passage up the Irish Sea Bay. There was much calculation as to how long they would take to sail the distance, and conjecture also as to the weather they would meet in the Channel. Every sail which hove up on the horizon raised a hope. But it was all in vain. Darkness came, and a first view of the racing fleet had to be left over until the morning.

In the early hours of the morning, and with none to see her, so to speak, Sir Mortimer Singer's Astra arrived and took up a position off the western end of the Victoria Wharf. Around 9 a.m. Sir Thomas Lipton's well-known Shamrock, put in an appearance, and tied up to a buoy at the eastern end of the same wharf, "the jetty," as it is known locally. Next came Mr. A. A. Paton's Lulworth, which anchored well in harbour, and following her there came Lord Waring's White Heather II. Sir William Berry's Cambria was then the only one to bring the fleet of the big cutters up to full strength. She arrived in the afternoon, and in the afternoon also Shamrock was moved to the eastern end of the harbour.

There are ten or eleven races on the card for each day of the regatta, but, interesting as each one of the minor events, the one race which stands out in the crowd is the first event, for yachts over 21 metres," in which the yachts named above will compete. It is years since yachts of their size have sailed in Dublin Bay. At present, the presence of Shamrock, White Heather, Lulworth, Astra, and Cambria brings Dublin in actual contact again with first-class yacht racing of to-day.

Five finer examples of the "big yachts" of the day could not be produced anywhere. As a matter of fact, and with the exception of Candida, every boat which is not being sent North to the Clyde, the full strength of the finest class of racing yachts afloat lies now in Kingstown harbour for everybody to see, and each ship open for inspection.

In these columns on Saturday the remark was made that when the racers arrive the height of their masts will dwarf everything else on harbour. How true this statement is a casual glance will disclose. Not alone do the racers proper dwarf all other craft, but their own spars, their masts, dwarf the hulls which carry them.

Look at any one of them. Her water line length, approximately 76ft. each, does not emphasise itself. The eye is caught by the altitude of the mast, which reaches a much greater height than 140ft. Consider the staying problem which each spar presents—viz., the security of the spar, with its ability to stand tremendous strains, relative to the narrow base line, measured by the width of the hull.

The main difference to the eye between the racing yachts of old and those of to-day is in the height of masts. It was the Marconi period which started it. In the old time there was a lower mast with a fidded topmast. Then the fid idea was abandoned, and the topmast dropped into a socket in the lower masthead, topmast and lower mast becoming the one spar as it were. The next process was the welding, so to speak, of the topsail yard into the topmast head in the same manner, and the latter had been fitted into the lower mast. The modern mast which can be seen exemplified at its maximum is Lulworth's, of 165ft. about, which really is lowermast, topmast and topsail yard included in one pole, a built up spar, made secure by modern knowledge in the art of staying, in which remarkable progress has been made.

It is only when one gets alongside one of these vessels that the reality of the mast problem can be appreciated. Then the reasons for the many spreaders and minor struts can be seen. The older cutters, Shamrock, White Heather II., and Lulworth are more simply rigged in this respect than are the two "Bermudians," Cambria and Astra. In fact, the maximum is reached in the last-named; she has two main spreader-trees and five minor spreaders, or struts, to take up strains on the spar. Perhaps this is due to the accident which happened to her last year on the Clyde, she being dismasted there in one of her earlier races. Lulworth, by the way, was dismasted a couple of seasons ago on the Clyde also. In fact, the only two which have not suffered in this way—we do not speak by the book, however—are Cambria and White Heather.

A row round the racing fleet to-day will repay the visit. White Heather at the moment is tied up to the guardship buoy in the angle of the East Pier. She has the appearance of a yacht just put into commission. She is the oldest yacht of the five, and her water-line measurement is 81 feet, while her mast, from truck to heel, is 150 feet.

Looking at the others, the two newest boats, Astra and Cambria, are nearest to the Victoria Wharf, the Cambria being the further out of the two. Note how the mast of each rakes aft. Not too much so, but marking a contrast with the older non-Bermudian cutters. Both are much of a muchness in the way of size, Astra being slightly smaller than the other vessels. They have a different designer, Nicholson being responsible for Astra, and Fife for Cambria.

East of these lies the Shamrock, and behind the pair mentioned lies Lulworth. Shamrock is an old friend. She is twenty years old today, but does not look it. She has crossed the Atlantic, making the passage under her own sail, outward and homeward. She is one of the finest ships ever designed and built; she is one of Fife's masterpieces.

Lulworth differs from the others in that she possesses a rail like a cruiser. Some years ago there was a yacht named Wendur. Years after her original owner, a Mr. Lee, had her redesigned and practically rebuilt, and she sailed in her races with the Shamrock and Britannia. The last time that Britannia sailed in Dublin Bay was against the revivified Wendur. The latter was a bit of a disappointment and could not come back, and her owner, designing a fresh vessel, gave an order to White, of Itchen, for a new cutter, and in this way the yacht now named Lulworth came into being. Lulworth is a yacht which possesses a personality. She is the largest of the five in harbour, has the loftiest mast and the greatest draught of water. It is said that she draws 17ft. 6in., which is exceptional. She has done wonderful things in her time, taking the Cape and so forth, and still there is a spice of the cruiser about her. And yet, was not the famous Britannia originally designed as a cruiser?

GOLF.

THE AMATEUR TITLE.

SURPRISES AT SANDWICH.

A FINE FINISH BY DR. MacCORMACK.

By a Special Correspondent.

SANDWICH, Monday Night.

An interesting day's golf on the Royal St. George's links made inroads into the record number of entries for the Amateur Championship, two-thirds of the first round being disposed of. There were, as always in the early stages of the championship, several unlooked for results, the most notable being the defeat of two players who were engaged in the English and Scottish international on Saturday. The overthrow of Eric Fiddian, the Boy Champion of 1927, who won his match for England, was quite unexpected, but his opponent, F. C. Sykes, of Addington, accomplished his success by placing a number of mashie shots very close to the flag.

Dr. MacCallum, the Scottish and British Internationalist, who achieved a surprising series of victories in last year's championship at Prestwick, was defeated by Lawrence Beesley, a left-handed London golfer, who at one hole adopted the unique method of lying on his back to study the line of his putt.

Popular interest was aroused in the appearance of John Dawson, the American. G. C. Igham, his opponent, however, did not answer his name. So much is thought of the American's chances that in the betting he is joint favourite with T. P. Perkins, the champion, and Cyril Tolley, against each of whom the odds offered were 10 to 1. Perkins does not play until to-morrow, when the first round will be concluded, and part of the second round decided.

Douglas Grant, against H. D. Gillies, played the best golf of the day, and was round in 71. They finished all square, and Grant won at the nineteenth. The results otherwise largely tell their own story.

Doctor J. D. MacCormack won a great match in the first round from Israel Sidebottom, a famous Cheshire player, by 2 and 1. The Irishman always had command of the game, and before he reached the seventh tee, where the match was square, he had obtained a lead on two occasions. Then he played the seventh and eighth so well that his opponent had no chance, and he turned two up. But his success was short lived, for Sidebottom, with two superb 4's, squared at the eleventh. MacCormack could not get the lead again until he won the long fourteenth, and then he retained it, made his advantage secure at the sixteenth with a 3, and halved the seventeenth in a splendid 4 for the match.

D. Wilson Smyth (Royal County Down), who lost to Rex Hartley of Sunningdale by 2 and 1, found that his short shots around the greens were not as accurate as usual, and he lost the third, fourth and fifth, which Hartley holed in 3, 4, 4 to become 1 up. Halving the next three in bogey figures, Smyth reduced the lead at the ninth, where he found the green with a great drive and iron into the wind, and then sank a four-yard putt for a 3.

Hartley was thus 1 up at the turn, which he reached in 36, to his opponent's 37—good figures for a breezy morning. Hartley started his homeward half well with a fine 4 at the tenth, and although he lost the eleventh, where he took three putts, the young Englishman was two holes ahead again at the twelfth with another good 4. Both players found the wind troublesome at the next three holes, which were halved in 5 each. Further halves in 3 and 5 were registered at the sixteenth and seventeenth, and Hartley thus won an excellent match.

BOXING.

KIRBY AND JOHN DRAW.

THE CORRI TESTIMONIAL.

A fly-wieght championship eliminating contest of fifteen rounds between Bert Kirby (Birmingham) and Phineas John (Newport) headed a programme of contests at the National Sporting Club, London, yesterday, in support of the testimonial fund for Mr. Eugene Corri, the well-known referee.

The result was a draw.

The ten-rounds supporting contests resulted:—

George Thompson (Newport) and Johnny Quill (Stepney) boxed a draw. Jack Mansfield (Old Ford) beat Charlie Hickman (Birmingham), the referee stopping the contest at the end of the second round after Hickman had been sent to he boards four times.

There were some interesting exhibition bouts. Phil Scott, the heavy-weight champion, sparred with Eddie Steele (Norwood); Len Harvey, the middle-weight title-holder, boxed with Joe Bloomfield, and Teddy Baldock, the bantam-weight champion, with Sammy King.

Mr. Moss Deyong, the referee, and Mr. George Graves conducted an auction from the ring, and this realised over £800.

MANCHESTER MARKETS REVIEW.

RECOVERY IN BUTTER.

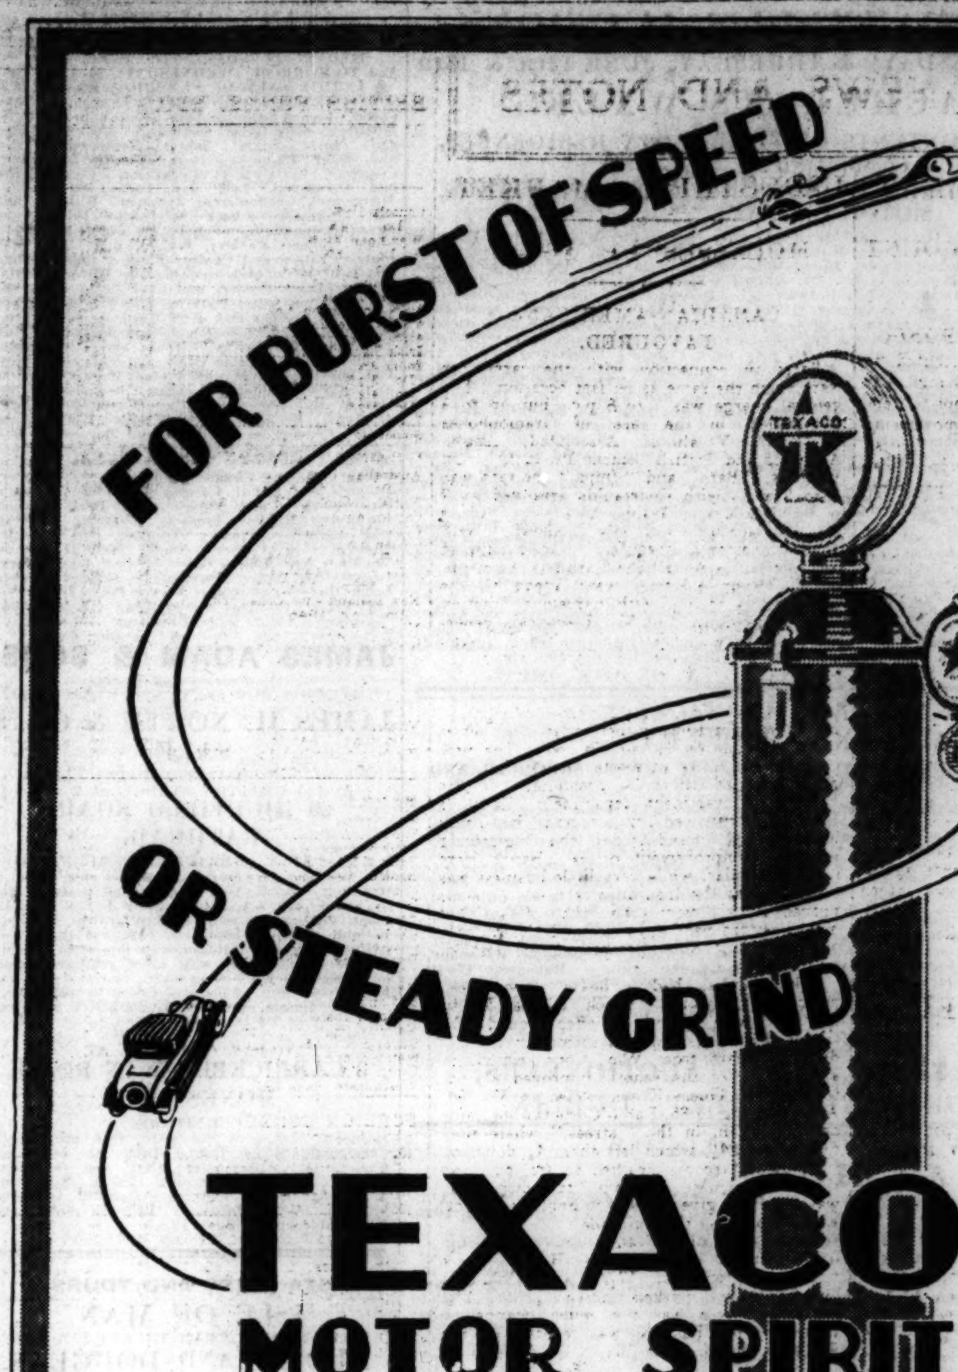
From Our Commercial Correspondent.

Business in most departments of the provision trade continues on moderate lines. The most important feature of the week is, perhaps, the recovery reported in the butter market generally. The Danish official quotation was wired 12 kroner higher this week-end at 285 kroner per 100 kilos, and spot prices for all makes advanced about 8s. per cwt. According to reports from Denmark, production in that country is barely as large as was anticipated, considering the fact that the season in that country is now well advanced. The butter is stated to be of excellent quality, pure grass-make, or nearly so, and there is some prospect of speculative buying in the near future, as also purchases for tin-packing. The opinion is also expressed that probably the heavy production during the ensuing few weeks will move off readily at hardening prices. Choicest Irish creameries continue to give every satisfaction, and move off readily at prices which compare very favourably with finest Scandinavian dairies. No official alteration is recorded in bacon, and late rates are repeated for Irish, Danish, Swedish and Dutch, and it is somewhat difficult to prophesy with regard to the future. There have been awkward features in the bacon market this year, attributable to adverse climatic conditions, as to which reference has previously been made. It may be monotonous to repeat figures relating to imports, but it should be pointed out that imports from Denmark in the first four months of the year amounted to only 1,573,581 cwts., as compared with 1,931,591 cwts. in the corresponding period of last year. Furthermore, there has been a reduction in the imports from Sweden, these totalling 107,883 cwts., against 195,050 cwts. in the same period of last year. There is an undoubted shortage of pigs in Denmark, which accounts for the very serious falling off in the exports of bacon from that country. An interesting point is that certain quantities of young pigs have been exported from Sweden to Denmark during the present year—not a large amount, but sufficient to indicate that Denmark at present is not in a position to ship the same big quantities as last year. The local bacon market has exhibited more stability during the past week, but supplies of all cures must increase materially before any permanent reduction in prices can take place. This does not appear likely from the present outlook, and the market is likely to be irregular during the next few months. In eggs owing to cheap spot prices and poor demand arrivals have been smaller, and supplies are, therefore, short. Cost prices are about sixpence higher, and imported best classes are also firmer.

There was again a falling off in supplies of fat cattle at Salford Cattle market on Tuesday. This is probably due to the fact that, while stall-fed beasts are now practically finished for the season, owing to the recent severe spell of cold weather, grass-fed are not yet ripe enough to be marketed in anything like large numbers. All classes of butchers' beasts cleared readily at prices favouring sellers, but only a quiet trade was experienced for dairy classes. A fair trade was reported for sheep and lambs, prices generally ruling steady. At the Manchester Dead Meat market a firm feeling was reported for both home-killed and imported beef towards the close, and a steady tone was also noted in all classes of mutton and lamb. Trade at the Manchester Pig market continues very slow, with supplies in excess of demand, and prices generally on the down grade.

There is again little change to record in dead poultry, and salmon is held for full rates, large fish being quoted 2s. 4d. to 2s. 6d. and medium 2s. 7d. to 2s. 9d. per lb. (wholesale).

Lady Cynthia Mosley, M.P., who recently underwent an operation, following strain after the General Election, expects to be perfectly well again in a week's time.



THE TEXAS CO. (OF IRELAND) LTD.

PRODUCE AND FOOD MARKETS.

London—Good demand and firm tone. Birkenhead—Slow trade for Cattle and worse for lambs. Merklands Wharf—Small numbers and bids below current values. Hull—Sharp trade all round. Manchester—Pig prices unchanged and trade slow. Birmingham—Pig Trade moderate. Rubber steady. Tin dearer. Copper firmer.

CATTLE.

BIRKENHEAD.—A slow trade prevailed for the cattle on offer, and late rates were difficult to maintain. Choice stall-fed bullocks and heifers made 10½d., secondary descriptions 10d., grass cattle 9½d. to 9¾d., cows and bulls 6d. to 7½d. A worse trade was experienced for lambs, the best qualities proportionally lower. On offer, 593 Irish cattle and 2,556 lambs.

LONDON (METROPOLITAN).—Entries of fat beasts were on a small scale and slightly under the number marketed at corresponding day last week. A good demand prevailed and tone firm, with only Norfolks offering at 6/2 to 6/8. Sheep supplies were again larger, an increase of 92 being penned. General course of trade proved slow, but sellers were not pressing, and prices marked no material change on balance. Home and mid-counties wethers ranged from 8/4 to 9/-, Kent ewes 4/4 to 5/-, and lambs 11/4 to 12/-, exceptionally 12/4, all per stone of 8 lbs., to sink the offal. Total supplies, 109 beasts; 2,736 sheep and lambs.

HULL.—Sharp trade all round. Best small cattle 11/- per stone, strong bullocks 11/6, small young cows 7/6 to 8/6, small pork 12/- per stone, medium 11/-, bacon 12/-, small young sheep 1/1½ per lb., strong do. 1/-, ewes 7½d to 9d., lambs 1/5 to 1/7.

MERKLANDS WHARF.—Arrivals at Merklands Wharf, Glasgow, of Irish cattle 1,303; bulk for distribution to other centres. There were offered for sale only 22 fat bullocks and 10 bulls, and these failed to interest the few buyers present, bids obtained being well below current values. Animals were put back for future sale.

BIRMINGHAM PIG.—Fair supply and trade moderate, the demand being steady, apart from cutters, with values maintained. Bacons firm at 18/- to 18/6 for choicer lots, but cutters slow at 17/6 to 18/-, and sows steady 13/6 per score dead-weight.

MANCHESTER PIG.—Shipments from Ireland to England for week ended May 25th total 4,431, against 2,509 previous week and 3,014 for corresponding period last year. Small pigs plentiful; baconers rather scarce, but spot supplies equal to all requirements. Trade slow and prices about unchanged. Baconers quoted around 18/-, porkers up to 18/-, and sows 13/6 per score.

DUBLIN CAMERA CLUB.

Owing to the heavy rain on Saturday last the Dublin Camera Club had to abandon the outing on the programme, and it went instead to Howth summit, visiting and taking photographs of the Baily Light, and returning to Howth by the Cliff path in time for tea. The afternoon was exceptionally bright and warm, despite the wet forenoon. A member of the club suggested a badge for members, and this has now become necessary owing to the growing membership. There were present—Mr. H. M. Dockrell, President; Mr. G. Prescott, A.M.I.E.E., Vice-President; Miss Hartnell, Hon. Secretary; Misses P. I. Pitman, M. Pitman, E. Pierce, Jackson, and Messrs. M. J. Kelly-Mor, J. F. Kelly, and T. Regan.

Four Finnish citizens have been sentenced by the Supreme Court at Leningrad to eight years' imprisonment for alleged espionage.
